Course Title	International Society and Law	Year Offered	2025
Instructor	SUGAWARA Emi	Year of Offering	1234
Subject Numbering	Please refer to the following for subject numbering. https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/numbering.html	Credit Hours	2 credits
Grade	G2	Teaching Method	Lecture
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	Analyzing International News from a Legal Perspective

Course Objectives and Overview	This course provides foundational knowledge for examining phenomena arising in a globalizing society from the perspective of law (rules). It covers: First, Introduction to Law (functions and types of law, hierarchy of laws, etc.); Second, fundamental knowledge of domestic and international law (treaty formation processes, judicial systems, etc.); Third, the interrelationship between domestic legal order and international legal order. Building upon this foundation, the course examines global challenges (such as nationality, extradition of criminals, counter-terrorism, infectious disease control, and financial crises) to deepen understanding of the dynamic interaction between domestic and international law. It aims to cultivate the ability to gain the essential “insights” necessary for future careers in the international community.
Prerequisites and Notes	Nothing special
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Possesses fundamental knowledge for studying international law (law, states, the international community, rules of international law, etc.). Can explain the diversity of the international community from the perspective of “law” using concrete examples (can explain the diversity of the international community, such as differences in values, based on problems and challenges that arise when applying rules). Can explain examples using the rules of international law explained by the instructor in class. Through international cases and issues, can accept the opinions and arguments of others and other countries that differ from one’s own or one’s country. Can then discuss the cases and issues.
Preparation for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	Each class session will include questions related to the lesson content, and students will submit reflection papers during and at the end of class. These reflection papers will be reviewed and discussed in the next class session, used to reflect on the lesson, and ensure the interactive nature of the class.

Notes for Taking This Course We recommend	The international community is composed of approximately 200 countries and regions, each possessing highly diverse histories, cultures, and institutions (incidentally, from Japan's perspective, 196 nations exist on Earth). At the same time, this international community is governed by universal laws (rules). I hope you will gain insights from the dynamic interplay between these universal rules and diverse nations and regions—insights that will connect to your future specialized studies and overseas experiences or study abroad.

Theme	Using the theory of Basic Economics as a foundation, this course explains the economic conditions and trends of various countries while relating them to relevant statistical data.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to develop the ability to interpret statistical data regarding the economic conditions and trends of countries worldwide, particularly in the Asia-Pacific region, and to understand fundamental economic concepts. By taking this course, students will gain the fundamental knowledge necessary to understand and interrelate various economic phenomena in different countries that are discussed in newspapers, television, and radio.
Prerequisites and Notes	This is an in-person class. The following post-class learning is required: • After class, review the lecture materials by rereading them multiple times (minimum 30 minutes)(※1) • Complete a questionnaire (※2) on the lecture content for that session (approx. 5 minutes) • Take a short quiz (※3) on the previous lecture's content (approx. 15 minutes) Prerequisites and Notes ※1 Each lecture's materials are 4-8 pages long in Japanese (A4 size). Even for those who read Japanese fluently, this takes about 30 minutes; for those less proficient in Japanese, it may take over 2 hours. ※ 2 The questionnaire will be completed at the end of the test on the "Learning Portal". Responses should not be simple "understood" or "did not understand", but must describe specific aspects related to that lecture. ※ 3 The test score, including the questionnaire, accounts for 60 points out of a total possible score of 100 points. With 15 lectures, the points added per test are approximately 4 points. Therefore, achieving a good score on each test is a requirement for passing.
Relevance to DP	For information on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	• Understand and explain key items in statistical data published by international organizations. • Be able to understand and explain the situations in various countries around the world based on statistical data. • Use the above knowledge to understand the content of topics covered in news sources such as newspapers.
Support for Qualification and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	Questions are accepted via Teams. • Questions relevant to all students will be addressed during the following week's (or the week after that's) class. • For questions not relevant to all students, answers will be provided within 2-3

Theme	Utilize TOEIC or TOEFL learning materials to strengthen English proficiency and build a foundation for the English communication skills necessary for effective interaction.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course comprehensively strengthens all four English skills, aiming for a TOEIC L&R score of 500 (or 600 depending on the class) or higher, and for TOEFL classes, a B1 level or higher in Listening/SWE (Structure and Written Expression)/Reading. • Solve TOEIC or TOEFL test-format questions, learn strategies, and aim for score improvement. • Acquire essential self-study methods for improving TOEIC or TOEFL scores. • Conduct vocabulary tests each session to reinforce high-frequency words, mastering usage and pronunciation. • Under the academic supervision of the university faculty, classes 2 and 3 on Wednesday 2nd period, Wednesday 2nd period Class ① (International Students + TOEFL Class), Class ②, and Class ② (International Students + General Students) will be taught by English instructors from ALC Corporation.
Prerequisites and Notes	This course is designed for students aiming to improve their English proficiency and is tailored for the TOEIC® L&R and TOEFL® ITP exams. International Studies students will be pre-assigned to classes based on their previous TOEIC scores and must pre-register. Students from the Faculties of Economics, Business Administration, and Law may also enroll. For first-year required English courses, the Intermediate level is recommended for Wed 2 Class 1, the Beginner level for Wed 2 Class 2, and the Basic level for Wed 2 Class 3. Additionally, Wed 2 Class ② (International Student Class + General Student Class) is for international students and some students pre-registered based on placement. International students from the Faculties of Economics, Business Administration, Law, and International Studies who wish to study English should actively enroll in Wed 2 Class ② (International Student Class + General Student Class). Furthermore, Wed 2 Class ① (TOEFL, General Students + International Students Class, Students Aiming for Exchange Programs) is an Advanced class focused on TOEFL preparation. Students aiming for exchange programs, those who wish to study for the TOEFL in the future, and international students with high English proficiency should actively enroll.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Objectives	Through activities ① to ④, achieve a TOEIC L&R score of 500 or higher (600 or higher depending on the class). For the TOEFL class, achieve a B1 or higher in Listening/Speaking/Writing/Reading. ① Strengthening Vocabulary and Grammar Skills Achieve a correct answer rate of 80% or higher on every vocabulary quiz (TOEIC high-frequency words). ② Improving Listening Skills for TOEIC/TOEFL

	Understand approximately 60% of key information (e.g., characters' actions, setting, topic overview) in the TOEIC Listening section. ③ Improving Reading Skills for TOEIC/TOEFL Become familiar with the formats of passages appearing on TOEIC and TOEFL and understand approximately 60% of the main points. ④Independent Learning Maintain a strong sense of purpose to achieve your target score, consistently complete assignments, and engage in learning proactively and systematically.

Theme	Solidify the foundation of English proficiency and aim to improve TOEIC® L&R scores.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course comprehensively strengthens all four English skills, targeting a TOEIC® L&R score of 550 or higher. Classes focus on solidifying essential vocabulary and grammar points crucial for score improvement, while intensively enhancing reading and listening comprehension. Furthermore, practical English proficiency is cultivated through output practice in writing and speaking.
Prerequisites and Notes	<International Studies Students> Students will be placed into classes based on their past TOEIC L&R scores and must pre-register. Since classes are organized by proficiency level, students wishing to enroll in this course without pre-registration should refer to the TOEIC score guidelines below and select a class matching their English level. <Students in the Faculty of Economics, Business Administration, and Law> Registration is possible within a limited number of spots per class. Students wishing to enroll in this course should select a class matching their English level based on the TOEIC score guidelines below. ◆Class Placement: TOEIC Score Guidelines Class 1: TOEIC 500 points or higher Class 2: TOEIC 400 points or higher Class 3: TOEIC 350 points or higher Class 4: TOEIC score below 350
Relevance to DP	For information on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Through efforts in ① to ④, aim for a TOEIC L&R score of 550 points or higher. ① Strengthening Vocabulary and Grammar Skills Achieve a correct answer rate of 80% or higher on every quiz (TOEIC frequently appearing words). ② Improving Listening Skills for TOEIC Through the TOEIC Listening Section (Parts 1-4), reliably grasp the main topic and key points, accurately understand approximately 70% of the detailed information (relationships between characters, conversation context, solutions or proposals, etc.), and grasp the main idea without missing it even in complex exchanges or speeches. ③ Improve reading skills for TOEIC Familiarize yourself with the formats of business documents commonly found on the TOEIC (such as advertisements, emails, and simple reports). After grasping the main idea and key points of relatively short texts (single passages), accurately read and comprehend approximately 60% of the detailed information within them (request details, underlying situations, important keywords, and conditions). ④ Self-directed learning Maintain a strong sense of purpose to achieve your target score, consistently complete assignments, and engage in learning proactively and systematically.

Theme	Solidify the foundation of English proficiency and aim to improve TOEIC® L&R scores.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course comprehensively strengthens all four English skills, targeting a TOEIC® L&R score of 600 or higher. Classes focus on solidifying essential vocabulary and grammar points crucial for score improvement, while intensively enhancing reading and listening comprehension. Furthermore, practical English proficiency is cultivated through output practice in writing and speaking.
Prerequisites and Notes	<International Studies Students> Students will be placed into classes based on their past TOEIC L&R scores and must pre-register. Since classes are organized by proficiency level, students wishing to enroll in this course without pre-registration should refer to the TOEIC score guidelines below and select a class matching their English level. <Students in the Faculty of Economics, Business Administration, and Law> Registration is possible within a limited number of spots per class. Students wishing to enroll in this course should select a class matching their English level based on the TOEIC score guidelines below. ◆Class Placement: TOEIC Score Guidelines Class 1: TOEIC 500 points or higher Class 2: TOEIC 400 points or higher Class 3: TOEIC 350 points or higher Class 4: TOEIC score below 350

Theme	By studying hot news topics from around the world in English, students will enhance their vocabulary and grammar skills, develop the ability to understand and communicate in academic English, and cultivate an international perspective through the lens of English-language news reporting.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course focuses on developing accurate English reading and listening comprehension skills by studying English news disseminated primarily through mass media in real time. By learning vocabulary, idioms, and grammar used in media, students aim to enhance their academic English skills. Additionally, students will acquire the foundational knowledge necessary to read English papers and articles as prior research when writing their Graduation Thesis. Through reading and viewing news from diverse fields, the course seeks to deepen specialized knowledge and logical thinking while cultivating a broad perspective. Students develop the ability to comprehend, communicate, and debate through research, presentations, and discussions. This process enhances overall English proficiency while nurturing a global viewpoint and fostering critical reflection on world events.
Prerequisites and Notes	Classes will be assigned after the first session. Class assignments for subsequent sessions will be posted on the Learning Portal; please check there.

Theme	Understand and discuss issues in the globalizing international society in English, and consider coexistence in society.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to read texts and media information in English to examine various issues in our increasingly globalized society. Using the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) established by the United Nations and recognized worldwide as a central framework, students will enhance their four English language skills by understanding and discussing global challenges. Furthermore, by studying these issues while developing a problem-consciousness as a member of the international community, students will cultivate international understanding, Inter-Cultural Understanding, and global perspective. Beyond improving practical English skills, acquiring fundamental knowledge, background information, and problem awareness necessary for navigating and thriving in future coexistence societies will enable students to engage in progressive discussions and activities regarding various issues, thereby enhancing their communication abilities overseas.

Theme	Understand and discuss issues in the globalizing international society in English, and consider coexistence in society.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to read texts and media information in English to examine various issues in our increasingly globalized society. Using the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) established by the United Nations and recognized worldwide as a central framework, students will enhance their four English language skills by understanding and discussing global challenges. Furthermore, by studying these issues while developing a problem-consciousness as a member of the international community, students will cultivate international understanding, Inter-Cultural Understanding, and global perspective. Beyond improving practical English skills, students will acquire fundamental knowledge, background information, and problem awareness necessary to navigate and thrive in future coexistence societies. This will enable them to engage in progressive discussions and activities regarding various issues and enhance their communication abilities overseas.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Students will be able to understand, discuss, and express their own ideas in English regarding changes in the global situation, challenges, and solutions arising from the progression of globalization. By acquiring diverse perspectives on global issues through learning, students will develop a broad outlook and be able to discuss world events in English.

Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	Analyze academic literature in international studies and acquire academic English skills
Course Objectives and Overview	Continuing from the spring semester, this course focuses on accurately reading and interpreting foundational materials in various fields of international studies, such as UN resolutions, economic white papers, and academic papers, all in English. By engaging with diverse academic documents written in English, the course aims to enhance students' academic English proficiency and enable them to utilize a wide range of reference materials to deepen their knowledge in their specialized fields. Beyond reading texts, the course teaches how to locate academic documents written in English and understand their fundamental logical structures. Students will also examine vocabulary and phrasing used in academic English compared to general English, thereby acquiring the unique expressive methods characteristic of the field. ※ It is desirable to have completed "Readings for International Studies I".
Prerequisites and Notes	Two classes will be offered based on a TOEIC score of 600. Please enroll in the class corresponding to your score. Class ①: TOEIC 600 or higher Only English is used in class & for assessment. Using another person's ideas or work & pretending that it is your own, or using content produced by ChatGPT, Grammarly's AI writer, or another generative AI tool for writing & content creation will result in an unsatisfactory (不可) grade. While the class is primarily conducted in English, Japanese will be used as appropriate. Class ②: TOEIC score below 600

Theme	Business Practical English Focused on Speaking (2)
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to enhance practical English communication skills applicable in business settings. Students will learn expressions and vocabulary commonly used in the workplace, such as self-introductions, business dinners, greetings, making appointments, and handling phone calls. It also aims to deepen Inter-Cultural Understanding and enable smooth communication with international business partners. Through role-plays and discussions, students will acquire practical English skills. While some prior English learning experience is desirable, the content is designed to accommodate students of a wide range of levels.
Prerequisites and Notes	Attending class serves two main purposes: 1. To ask questions about homework or general English topics to the instructor and other students. 2. To apply knowledge gained while completing assignments. Students' goals in class are to learn and to help each other learn. The teacher's role is to support student learning. Important Notes: Without the desire to learn, teachers cannot force students to study. Also, please refrain from actions that hinder those who are motivated to learn. Adopt an attitude of actively engaging in your studies.
Relevance to the Degree Policy (DP)	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Objectives	Learn the English fundamentals essential for business communication and aim to achieve an English proficiency level equivalent to a TOEIC score of 400 or higher. This class specifically targets developing speaking skills among the four English language skills. Furthermore, it aims to cultivate the ability to utilize acquired knowledge and skills to engage in discussions with diverse individuals holding differing values and opinions both domestically and internationally, deepen learning, and collaborate to contribute to society.

Theme	Develop essential English skills necessary for translation.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to equip students with fundamental translation concepts while enhancing their English reading comprehension and Japanese expression skills. While accurate understanding of the source text is essential as a translation foundation, the practice requires not only interpretive ability but also advanced Japanese language proficiency and translation-specific thinking. The course aims to develop the ability to translate various types of English into Japanese appropriate for each context and situation. Furthermore, through the analysis of specific translation tasks, students will gain an understanding of the fundamental differences in thought patterns and cognitive structures between Japanese and English.

Theme	Acquisition of fundamental interpreting techniques and improvement of English speaking skills
Course Objectives and Overview	This course is not only for students aspiring to become business interpreters or tour guides (interpreting guides), but also actively targets students aiming for careers requiring advanced English skills, such as overseas sales positions. The course incorporates training methods actually used by interpreters (such as shadowing, sight translation, paraphrasing, and note-taking) to develop the foundational skills in consecutive interpreting required in business and tourism settings. It also examines the role interpreters should play in today's era of widespread AI-powered instant interpretation and translation, and the importance of uniquely human skills like contextual understanding and empathetic expression that AI cannot replace.
Prerequisites and Notes	Students enrolled in this course are expected to dedicate approximately 4 hours per week to self-directed learning (reviewing class content, completing quizzes, working on assignments, and preparing for upcoming sessions) to achieve their desired career paths and set goals.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Acquire the English proficiency required in business and tourism settings through foundational interpreting training. 2. Enhance the ability to quickly switch between English and Japanese using appropriate vocabulary and expressions in daily conversation and business settings. 3. Deepen understanding of the interpreter's role, skills, and qualities necessary for smooth communication with a global and professional perspective, regardless of the other person's native language.

Theme	Understanding the Mechanisms of Conversation for Building Smooth Human Relationships
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to cultivate the ability to use precise vocabulary and idiomatic expressions correctly, enabling students to acquire techniques for smooth communication in Japanese across various settings such as business and social life. Communication is an interactive process involving the exchange of information and the maintenance and building of relationships. The spring semester focuses on maintaining and building relationships. Students will learn about honorifics and humble language deeply rooted in Japanese culture, as well as the universal theory of politeness applicable to all languages. This deepens their understanding of "speaking politely" according to the listener. Consequently, students will develop the ability to convey their thoughts to others using appropriate expressions suited to the situation.

Theme	Acquire the logical thinking techniques necessary for writing papers and reports.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to help students understand the characteristics of academic writing required for papers and reports and improve their academic writing skills. First, students will understand that writing papers and reports involves thinking rationally about issues and expressing those thoughts persuasively. Building on this, students will deepen their understanding of logical thinking techniques through practice exercises and learn to apply them to their writing. Students will submit reflection sheets after each class to deepen their understanding of the techniques learned. Furthermore, through self-assessment of their own writing, peer feedback, and instructor critiques, students will enhance their revision skills.

Theme	Developing a Comparative Cultural Perspective
Course Objectives and Overview	This course examines specific topics drawn from Japanese culture and other cultures. Through comparison, students will understand that culture possesses both unique and universal characteristics, aiming to cultivate the ability to recognize the value of individual cultures. Moving beyond traditional disciplinary boundaries, students will develop an approach to interdisciplinary and comprehensive cultural studies using comparative methods. From the perspective of developing employability skills, the course fosters logical thinking and a broad perspective. The first half of the course (Sessions 1-8) focuses on learning cultural comparisons and corresponding strategies based on Inter-Cultural Communication in settings like the workplace. The second half (Sessions 9-14) delves deeper into the underlying "culture" and "history" behind the phenomena introduced in the first half.
Prerequisites and Notes	This course is an advanced course in "Inter-Cultural Understanding" and an advanced course in the "Society/Culture" domain of English Communication.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Understand the characteristics of specific aspects of culture. 2. Be able to analyze cultural differences as objectively as possible. 3. Understand the role of history and culture in determining social norms. 4. Understand the commonalities and differences between cultures and provide specific examples. 5. Specifically, grasp and explain similarities and differences between Japanese culture and other cultures.

Theme	Understand the fundamental concepts and current state of multicultural coexistence societies.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to enable students to: ① correctly understand and explain the basic concepts of multicultural coexistence theory; ② understand the current state of multicultural coexistence societies through case studies; and ③ acquire the mindset necessary to behave appropriately when placed in a multicultural coexistence society themselves. Using case studies, we will examine the situations of cultural minorities in Japanese society, such as foreign workers, the Ainu people, and Zainichi Koreans. We will also broaden our perspective globally to address issues concerning indigenous peoples, religious minorities, migrant workers, and others, exploring methods for resolving these problems.
Prerequisites and Notes	[For Students Enrolling in 2023 and Later] This course is an advanced subject, building upon "World Viewed from Society/Culture" in "Foundations of International Studies A" and the foundational specialized subject "International Sociology." As this course builds upon previously acquired knowledge of Inter-Cultural Understanding and International Sociology to establish fundamental concepts of multicultural coexistence theory, it is recommended for students enrolled in 2023 or later who have selected the English Communication Course. Furthermore, students planning to select the Asia-Pacific Course are also encouraged to take this course, as it equips them with knowledge and perspectives on multicultural coexistence theory essential in today's increasingly globalized society. [Students Enrolled Before 2022] This course is an advanced course in the Law, Politics, and Culture domain, building upon "Inter-Cultural Understanding I," "Inter-Cultural Understanding II," and "Cross-Cultural Adaptation Theory." It is part of the specialized development courses in the "International Understanding Subject Group." As it provides fundamental knowledge on multicultural coexistence, students are strongly encouraged to take it.

This subject's coursework	"Multiculturalism" is an everyday phenomenon in Japanese society. Particularly in the latter half of this course, we will examine specific initiatives aimed at multicultural coexistence. Therefore, please approach this not merely as "book learning," but as something happening around you and relevant to your own life. This attitude should naturally lead to simple questions. This course places great importance on such simple questions, so please feel free to ask the instructor directly or via email. Approach the course with questions and curiosity, and the necessary knowledge and understanding will naturally follow. The required reading for each session will be posted on the Learning Portal. Please read it beforehand and come prepared for class.

This subject's coursework	First, what exactly is "culture"? We can cite specific examples like customs, language, and ways of life, but does simply gathering many such elements create the overall entity called "culture"? And what about "multiculturalism"? Can we say a situation is multicultural simply because people from various countries and regions gather together? What does it mean to encounter and understand different cultures within such a context? In this class, we will reexamine the concepts of culture—something we often hear about but find elusive upon closer consideration—as well as different cultures, multiculturalism, and multiculturalism. There is no single correct answer, but let's grapple with these questions together.

Theme	To deepen understanding of Korean society and culture and cultivate skills for international exchange.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course broadly examines the social and cultural transformations within modern Korean history. Specifically, it addresses themes such as anti-communism in Korea, the process of economic development, issues of gender and sexuality, the history of civic movements, and art history. Each social phenomenon, cultural product, and people's experiences will be examined in relation to the context of modern Korean history. To complement the macro-level lecture content and help students grasp the micro-level lived experiences of people in modern Korean history, the course will introduce relevant novels, films, dramas, comics, books, and documentaries. Each class session will incorporate activities as needed, such as true/false quizzes, discussions (group work) where students share their own experiences and perspectives, and the creation of comment papers.
Prerequisites and Notes	Attend every class actively. Evaluation will emphasize participation in each class and the completion of comment papers and worksheets.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Understand the social and cultural changes in modern Korean history and be able to explain them in your own words. 2. Compare the societies and cultures of Korea and one's own country/home country and critically examine them.

This subject's coursework	● 14 in-person sessions will be held (Session 15 will be conducted on-demand). 【Detailed Grading Method and Criteria】 ● "Active Participation and Engagement in Class (60%)" will be evaluated based on classroom participation attitude and the creation/submission of comment papers and worksheets. Each session will be graded out of 60 points, and the average score (from all 15 sessions) will be reflected in the final grade. (※ Please note that missing a session results in a score of 0 for that session. If you must be absent due to unavoidable circumstances, please notify us in advance.) ● "Periodic Exam: Report (40%)" requires selecting a work from those introduced in class (a list will be distributed) and writing a report (reflection essay). Guidelines for writing the report will be provided during class.

Theme	Acquiring Knowledge of Japanese Culture
Course Objectives and Overview	This course is conducted entirely in English. The course aims to acquire knowledge about Japanese culture. Specifically, the central goal is to deepen understanding of early modern Japanese culture, which forms the foundation of contemporary Japanese culture. Through lectures and explanations, students will gain an understanding of the characteristics of Japanese culture, particularly during the early modern period, in English, and develop the ability to communicate this knowledge to others. Furthermore, the course aims to cultivate English proficiency that enables students not only to recognize the characteristics of Japanese culture from a global perspective but also to communicate this understanding effectively in English. From the perspective of developing employability skills, the course fosters logical thinking and a broad perspective.
Prerequisites and Notes	This course is an advanced course in "Inter-Cultural Understanding" and an advanced course in the "Society/Culture" domain of English communication.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Be able to explain Japanese culture in English. 2. Recognize and explain important aspects of Japanese culture, regardless of whether they pertain to the modern, contemporary, or pre-modern periods. 3. Understand the influence past cultures have had on contemporary Japanese culture. 4. Understand the impact of Japanese culture on Japan's "soft power."

This subject's coursework For	For students in the Faculty of International Studies, 'Inter-Cultural Understanding' is a crucial challenge. While actively engaging in daily interactions and gaining overseas experience to develop an international perspective is important, it is also expected that studying the theories and specific examples introduced in this course will further deepen your Inter-Cultural Understanding. Through active participation in class (note-taking, group work, Q&A, etc.) and thorough preparation and review, strive to thoroughly learn the ideas and specific examples presented.

Class Sessions	Class Format	Course Plan	Pre- and Post-Class Learning (Preparation, Review, etc.)	Pre- and Post-Class Study Time
Session 1	In-Person	"Course Introduction: Kamigata and Edo" To provide a starting point for considering the early modern period, examine the cultural, social, and economic characteristics of the "Kamigata" and "Edo" regions during this era.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 1 handout and your own class notes. Additionally, read the Lecture 2 materials posted on the Learning Portal beforehand.	4 hours
Second Session	Face-to-Face	"People (1): The Townspeople" In a society based on social status, an individual's future was largely determined at birth. However, the townspeople of that era diligently pursued culture and learning. We will study the characteristics of townspeople culture as the background that gave rise to this highly refined culture.	After class, thoroughly review the handout for Session 2 and your own class notes. Also, read the Session 3 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 3	In-Person	"People (2): The Warrior Class" Although samurai were the ruling class in early modern society, there was still a stark difference between wealthy daimyo-level samurai and lower-ranking samurai. Learn about the characteristics of samurai life, including how they considered their "reason for existence" during peaceful times without war.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 3 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 4 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 4	In-Person	People (3): The Shogun and the Daimyo Lords The Tokugawa Shogun was, in effect, the ruler of the nation. However, focusing on the Shogun's lifestyle reveals	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 4 handout and your own class notes. 		Is that compared to the lavish lifestyles of foreign rulers, the Shogun's daily life was modest and frugal. With this in mind, we will learn about the characteristics of the lifestyles of the Shogun and the Daimyo Lords.
Session 5	In-Person	"People (4): Women in Premodern Japan" In the early modern period, the influence of Confucianism grew stronger, restricting women's rights and freedoms and severely limiting opportunities for them to express their individuality. We will focus on several patterns of life, such as "women of the warrior class," "women of the merchant class," and "courtesans," and also examine their impact on modern society.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 5 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 6 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 6	In-Person	"People (5): Children in Premodern Japan" Even in an era without compulsory education, the widespread educational institutions known as "terakoya" enabled many commoner children to learn to read and write. We will study the reality of this system. We will also examine children's games and toys in Edo.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 6 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 7 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 7	In-Person	"Creativity (1): Ukiyoe Prints and Kuzazoshi Picturebooks" Learn about the creativity of people in the early modern period through an introduction to "ukiyo-e" (woodblock prints), which greatly influenced French Impressionism, and "kuzazōshi" (picture books), published during the New Year period.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 7 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 8 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 8	In-Person	"Creativity (2): The Kabuki Theatre" Kabuki was not merely a "play"; it was a shared culture for everyone, regardless of age or gender, serving a role similar to modern television. Learn about popular Kabuki actors, famous works, and performances.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 8 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 9 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 9	In-Person	"Creativity (3): The Joruri Puppet Theatre" Joruri (modern Bunraku) flourished particularly during the mid-early modern period, even surpassing Kabuki in popularity during its "golden age." As time progressed, puppet and shamisen techniques advanced, allowing modern Bunraku to continue captivating audiences. Against this historical backdrop, we will study the development and refinement of Joruri.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 9 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 10 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session	In-Person	"Creativity (4): Dutch Studies in Japan"	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 10 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 11 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours

The "Tekijuku" school, founded by Ogata Koan in Osaka, was a representative Rangaku academy where many Meiji-era thinkers and politicians, including Fukuzawa Yukichi, studied. We will examine the reasons why this school produced such outstanding individuals.	d Lecture 10 handout and your own lecture notes. Additionally, read the Lecture 11 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.
Session 11	In-Person	"Creativity (5): The Tokaido and its Culture" The Tokaido is a highway running eastward from Kyoto along the Pacific coast. We will learn about the social and cultural significance of the Tokaido during the Edo period and the ukiyo-e prints and publications born from the romance of the Tokaido.	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 11 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 12 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 12	In-Person	"Heroes (1): The Scholar Sugawara no Michizane" Sugawara no Michizane, who appears in "Sugawara Denju Tenarai Kagami"—one of the three masterpieces of the golden age of joruri—is renowned as a Heian-period statesman, scholar, and man of letters. After his death, he was deified as "Tenjin." We will study the character of Sugawara no Michizane, who was beloved by the common people as the god of "terakoya" (temple schools).	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 12 handout and your own class notes. Also, read the Lecture 13 materials posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 13	In-Person	"Heroes (2): The Tragic Warrior Minamoto no Yoshitsune and Shizuka Gozen" Minamoto no Yoshitsune, who appears in Yoshitsune Senbonzakura—one of the Three Great Masterpieces—is a quintessential Japanese folk hero whose legend is recorded in the Yoshitsune-ki. His lover, Shizuka Gozen, is also a shirabyōshi (white dancer) frequently featured in Noh and jōruri. Through numerous ukiyo-e prints, kōzōshi (illustrated storybooks), theatrical works, and other materials related to Yoshitsune, we will study the character portrayals of Minamoto no Yoshitsune and Shizuka Gozen.	After class, thoroughly review the handout for Lecture 13 and your own class notes. Also, read the materials for Lecture 14 posted on the Learning Portal in advance.	4 hours
Session 14	In-Person	"Heroes (3): Oishi Kuranosuke, Leader of the Ako Ronin" The "Ako Ronin Incident" that occurred during the Genroku period greatly shocked the people of Tokugawa-era Japan, which had finally achieved peace, and intellectuals of the time were	After class, thoroughly review the distributed Lecture 14 handout and your own class notes. Theme	How do we shape our life through cultural practices?
Course Objectives and Overview	This course explores intercultural issues and cultural theories that allow us to understand what we (usually) unconsciously do in everyday cultural practices and frameworks, including popular music. At the same time, this course introduces concepts such as "hybridity," "cultural industry," "postcoloniality," and "westernization/modernization" to enable students to grasp the cultural interactions and acculturations occurring across "national" borders. In particular, the impact of American culture during the post-war period and the acculturation of American values in the context of Japan will be investigated in the last three classes of the course.
Prerequisites and Notes	Note: There is a possibility of holding a fieldwork in one of the classes if all the enrolled students wish to do so. Note also that in case we do conduct fieldwork, there needs to be some preparation time in the class prior to it.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Objectives	The goal of the class is twofold: (1) to expose students to the study of culture through works taken from a variety of disciplines as well as concrete examples of cultural pieces, and (2) through such endeavor, to have the students be able to analyze everyday cultural practices within the broader context of cultural and historical interactions. Specifically, students will develop a self-reflective awareness of Japanese culture and its position within East Asia, while also recognizing the impact of Westernization and modernization. This will require developing analytical tools to foster meaningful dialogue grounded in theoretical frameworks. Topics explored will include cultural variables, communication norms and their differences, potential problems arising during intercultural interaction, and ways to address these problems.

Theme	Understand the trends and challenges of international migration in a global society through theory and case studies.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course is conducted in English. The course aims to understand trends in population movement accompanying globalization, issues surrounding immigrants and the nation-state, and new currents in migration concerning citizenship, culture, and political economy. We will analyze and discuss the process of immigrant socialization through the lens of ethnic diversity, racial discrimination, and multiculturalism. Furthermore, by studying immigrant societies worldwide, students will cultivate the international understanding, Inter-Cultural understanding, global perspective, and English proficiency necessary to thrive in a global society. From the perspective of developing employability, the course fosters logical thinking skills and a broad outlook.
Prerequisites and Notes	This course is an advanced subject in the Law, Politics, and Culture domain. It is an upper-level course following "International Society and Human Mobility" and "Multi-Cultural Societies." All classes are conducted in English. Instruction will be tailored to students' English proficiency levels and follow the course plan.
DP Relevance	For information on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Objectives	The goal is to understand international migration trends in English. Specifically, students will understand the dynamics of international population movements and the concrete changes international migration brings to society. Students will comprehend the reference books, English articles, and PowerPoint materials used in class in English, acquiring foundational knowledge on theories, policies, and cultures related to international migration. In the latter part of the course, students will discuss several topics in English. This is expected to improve all four English language skills, ultimately aiming to develop the English proficiency necessary to express personal opinions and engage in discussions about specific events overseas.

This subject’s coursework Cross-border international migration is by no means a new phenomenon. Hum	Cross-border international migration is by no means a new phenomenon. Over the past two to three centuries, humanity has moved in search of new opportunities due to poverty, conflict, and environmental degradation. While researchers, engineers, and workers active as international migrants are dispersed worldwide, conflicts and issues persist between states and international migrants, as well as between majority populations and immigrants. In this course, we will understand international migration trends in English and discuss the challenges and possibilities within the social environment facing international migrants. To grasp the specialized content, pre- and post-class learning is essential. Please study the assignments given in class and actively engage in discussions about migration during class sessions.

Theme	To understand issues and policies related to language in contemporary Japanese society.
Course Objectives and Overview	It is said that over 6,000 languages exist worldwide. Which language to select as the national language or official language and promote has become a crucial policy issue in the formation of modern nation-states and the maintenance of national unity. Simultaneously, regional and minority languages have often been targets of suppression. However, in recent years, respect for the "right to language"—the right to use one's desired language—has been advocated, leading to efforts for the revival and protection of regional and minority languages. Furthermore, as societies worldwide become increasingly multilingual and multicultural, language policies responsive to this diversity are now required. This course examines trends in language policy in Japan and abroad, considering their historical and social contexts. It focuses on Japan's increasingly multilingual society, exploring the current state and necessary future policies.

This subject is When it comes to language policy, it might seem like something very difficult	When you hear "language policy," it might sound like something very difficult. However, you probably learned Japanese language using textbooks written in the so-called standard language in elementary school. You likely studied English as a foreign language in elementary and middle school. All of this is done under language policy. In Japanese society, where multilingualism is advancing, why don't we think together about what kind of language policy will be needed going forward?

Theme	This course provides an overview of trends in international tourism (inbound and outbound), tourism policy, and the theories and methods of tourism-based community development.
Course Objectives and Overview	The 21st century sees human mobility occurring on a global scale. As tourism has become a major pillar of the world economy, it is referred to as the "era of international tourism." In Japan, facing a super-aged society, "tourism" is a growth industry attracting significant attention. Particularly since 2013, the increase in inbound tourists has been nothing short of phenomenal. This course aims to grasp the concepts of outbound and inbound international tourism, focusing particularly on learning about regional revitalization driven by inbound tourism, which holds great promise for becoming a key driver of Japan's future economy. It also provides an overview of the theories and methods for creating tourist-friendly communities that attract foreign visitors.

Theme	Understand hospitality and develop the ability to practice it daily.
Course Objectives and Overview	Hospitality, initially practiced in the tourism industry such as hotels, travel, and restaurants, has gradually been adopted across all industries, particularly in service-oriented fields. The goal of hospitality is to build and maintain positive human relationships. Practicing hospitality means acting with genuine consideration for others. This course explores hospitality through case studies, examining the mindset and behaviors required, and includes group work and presentations. We will also practice manners applicable to daily life. The goal is to be valued during job hunting and, once employed, to earn the trust of colleagues and customers while building positive relationships. Students will also have the opportunity to learn about real-world applications of hospitality concepts through lectures by active guest speakers.
Prerequisites and Notes	Classes are not solely lecture-based; group work is conducted every session. Students are shuffled by grade level and other factors, and presentations are made within designated groups.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Students will understand the importance of hospitality, learn to accept and respect each individual's unique personality and values, and develop the ability to practice hospitality. They will acquire communication skills to build positive relationships with others, aiming to apply these skills in future job hunting and social activities.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	Students submit "Today's Insights" via LearningPortal after each class. This sheet records personal insights, learning points, and questions about the session. Theme	Understand hospitality and develop the ability to practice it daily.
Course Objectives and Overview	Hospitality, initially practiced in the tourism industry such as hotels, travel, and restaurants, has gradually been adopted across all industries, particularly in service-oriented fields. The goal of hospitality is to build and maintain positive human relationships. Practicing hospitality means acting with genuine consideration for others. This course explores hospitality through case studies, examining the mindset and behaviors required, and includes group work and presentations. We will also practice manners applicable to daily life. The goal is to be valued during job hunting and, once employed, to earn the trust of colleagues and customers while building positive relationships. Students will also gain insight into real-world applications of hospitality through lectures by active guest speakers.
Prerequisites and Notes	Classes are not solely lecture-based; group work is conducted every session. Students are shuffled by grade level and other factors, and presentations are made within designated groups.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Students will understand the importance of hospitality, learn to accept and respect each individual's unique personality and values, and develop the ability to practice hospitality. They will acquire communication skills to build positive relationships with others, aiming to apply these skills in future job hunting and social activities.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	Students submit "Today's Insights" via the LearningPortal after each class. This sheet should include personal insights, learning points, and questions about the session. At the start of the next class, the instructor will answer questions, provide supplementary explanations, and highlight notable insights.
Active Learning Initiatives	Discussion, Debate, Deliberation / Group Work / Presentation, Announcement, Report
Courses Taught by Instructors with Practical Experience	The instructor for this course is a certified career consultant with experience in student employment guidance at vocational schools and human resources recruitment at private companies. This course leverages this practical experience to provide hands-on education in self-analysis and industry/company research.

Theme	Examining China-Taiwan Relations from Various Perspectives
Course Objectives and Overview	This course examines the relationship between China (the People's Republic of China) and Taiwan (the Republic of China) from historical, political, and economic perspectives. While China considers Taiwan an inalienable part of its territory, the Republic of China exists on the island. We will explore how this situation arose, covering the period from the Chinese Civil War following World War II to the present day, examining various aspects including history, politics, and economics. Following Russia's invasion of Ukraine in 2022, concerns about a potential Chinese invasion of Taiwan or scenarios like a "Taiwan contingency" have become topics of discussion in newspapers and on television. Understanding this requires knowledge of the history between China and Taiwan. This lecture will examine Taiwan's history, overview its relationship with China, and explore the China-Taiwan relations that have led to the present situation. Taking this course will deepen your understanding of China-Taiwan relations and Taiwan itself. The content will be adjusted as appropriate based on the class's level of understanding.

Theme	Examine contemporary Korea from multiple perspectives.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to deepen understanding of the underlying social conditions by examining familiar topics related to Korea and recent social issues. The first half will provide an overview of modern Korea's geography, society, economy, and culture. The second half will set specific topics for examination, exploring the "present" and "future" of Korean society. This approach fosters a comprehensive, multifaceted understanding of the diverse challenges and social changes facing Korea, aiming to enhance critical thinking skills. Each class incorporates activities as needed, such as true/false quizzes, discussions where students share their own experiences and perspectives (group work), and writing comment papers.
Prerequisites and Notes	Attend every class actively. Evaluation will emphasize participation in each class and the creation of comment papers.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Gain an overall understanding of the geography, society, economy, and culture of modern Korea. 2. Develop critical thinking skills and the ability to articulate ideas by examining social issues in Korean society while also directing attention to one's own social environment and circumstances.

Theme	Japan's Development Cooperation: Focusing on the Asia-Pacific Region
Course Objectives and Overview	This course examines Japan's development cooperation, which has significantly contributed to the economic and social development of Asia-Pacific countries from the postwar period to the present. Development cooperation involves support for diverse development challenges in developing countries, including human resource development, infrastructure development, natural disasters, environmental issues, and peacebuilding. At its core is ODA (Official Development Assistance). Specific ODA support methods include yen loans, technical cooperation, and grant aid. This course focuses on the Asia-Pacific region, including small Pacific island nations, exploring: 1) the historical context and characteristics of Japan's ODA, and 2) how ODA has contributed to the economic development and sustainable development of developing countries. In addition to the above, we will also touch upon the roles of international organizations, local governments, corporations, and NGOs/NPOs involved in Japan's ODA, as well as the activities of the Japan Overseas Cooperation Volunteers (JOCV), a program highly valued by developing countries that involves the participation of young Japanese people.
Prerequisites and Notes

Regarding taking this course In this course,	This course focuses particularly on the Asia-Pacific region. However, when you hear "Asia-Pacific region," how many people actually picture the small island nations of the Pacific? A common concept across the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) is "No one left behind." Following this principle, development cooperation must not overlook the existence of these small island nations. With this in mind, this course will also shine a spotlight on these countries. Let's remember these seemingly minor entities and think together about development cooperation from a broad perspective!

Theme	Studying International Relations in the Asia-Pacific Region
Course Objectives and Overview	This course systematically examines the political, diplomatic, and security-related conflicts, competition, and cooperative relationships within the postwar Asia-Pacific region. It explores the background behind the formation of the Asia-Pacific region as a political concept and the factors leading to the emergence of alternative regional concepts (such as the Indo-Pacific) in recent years. The Asia-Pacific region is becoming a central player in 21st-century international relations. This politically constructed region is characterized not only by competition among major military and economic powers but also by cooperation among nations with diverse cultures and religions. To explore stability and coexistence in the Asia-Pacific region going forward, let us study together the region's history and current state.
Prerequisites and Notes	We recommend taking this course alongside other international relations or international politics courses such as International Relations Theory or Political Geography (not required). • Strongly recommended for those aiming for graduate studies in international relations or international politics • There is no single "correct answer" to the content of this lecture. Objectively analyzing diverse information and maintaining an open attitude toward opinions differing from your own will be highly valued • If you encounter news articles related to what you learn in class, please write down the main points and your own opinion in your notebook. This will definitely be useful during your job search.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please check the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	The goal is for students to acquire the following knowledge by the end of the course: • Understand the history of conflict and competition among countries and regions in the Asia-Pacific during the Cold War and post-Cold War periods • Explain the major issues of contention and frameworks for cooperation within the Asia-Pacific region • Explain the transformation of the Asia-Pacific regional order against the backdrop of globalization and U.S.-China competition
Support for Qualification and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	• Collect questions from students using comment cards and provide answers or comments in subsequent weeks • Q&A sessions will be held during or after class • Distribute supplementary materials (or post them on the learning portal) as needed and introduce reference materials and literature

Theme	Examining climate change and biodiversity from the perspectives of international relations, economics, and business.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course examines the global challenges addressed by the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) through the common lenses of "Economy," "Society," and "Environment" shared by international relations, international economics, and international business. Students will learn from a cross-disciplinary perspective and deepen their understanding through multi-layered viewpoints encompassing domestic/regional and global dimensions. Furthermore, through lectures by guest speakers, students will gain concrete insights into how diverse actors (states, international organizations, civil society, business centers, etc.) are working toward achieving the SDGs.
Prerequisites and Notes	The SDGs Special Lecture series consists of three courses: this course, "SDGs Special Lecture A" (Environment), along with "SDGs Special Lecture B" and "SDGs Special Lecture C" (Society/Economy). Through these three courses, students learn about the global challenges outlined by the 17 goals. For graduation requirements, the SDGs Special Lecture is a required elective; students must complete at least one of the three courses.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	① Be able to explain what climate change and biodiversity issues are. ② Understand and explain key points regarding climate change and biodiversity from the perspectives of international economics and international relations. ③ Acquire knowledge about how governments, businesses, and civil society are addressing climate change and biodiversity challenges, and be able to explain the overview of these efforts.

Regarding taking this course Regarding	The SDGs Special Lecture series consists of three courses: this course, "SDGs Special Lecture C" (Economy, Peace, and Justice), along with "SDGs Special Lecture A" and "SDGs Special Lecture B" (Environment, Society, and Development). Through these three courses, students will learn about the global challenges outlined by the 17 Sustainable Development Goals. For graduation requirements, the SDGs Special Lecture series is a required elective. Students must complete at least one of the three courses. The SDGs are a crucial concept for you, the future leaders, in building a sustainable future. This course explores the SDGs through case studies on achieving decarbonization and from the perspective of community development. We hope it provides an opportunity to consider the future from diverse viewpoints. The "Peace" addressed by the SDGs involves not only creating situations free from conflict (violence) but also building the very foundation for societal sustainability. We hope you will learn how diverse actors—including governments (including local governments), international organizations, businesses, and civil society—are engaging with this challenge and deepen your own thinking about how you will engage with it.

Theme	Where Do Differences in Political Systems Originate, and What Do They Produce?
Course Objectives and Overview	When following recent international news, you likely find yourself asking, "Why did that happen?" While various factors are at play, this course will deepen your understanding of that question by examining commonalities and differences in political systems across various countries. Understanding political systems also requires grasping economics and culture. Moreover, comprehending these elements is essential for navigating the increasingly interconnected world beyond borders. While covering every country and political system is impossible, this course will examine Asian nations with strong ties to Japan as case studies, approaching the subject through concrete contexts. Let us study Comparative Political Science together through the lens of real-world issues unfolding in today's turbulent international society.

This subject's coursework Regarding this course	• This course will cover various countries and regions. While the information volume may be substantial, we do not expect you to memorize everything. Focus on each lecture, understand the content, think for yourself, and develop the ability to articulate your thoughts. • Review will primarily be conducted through writing short reports. You will organize and analyze the content covered in the lectures, focusing on key terms, at a level that should be understandable if you attend the lectures regularly. • Since the goal is to understand the real world, regularly following the news will deepen your understanding of the lectures and connect to practical learning. • The countries and regions covered may change based on students' comprehension and interests. We welcome active participation—not only asking questions about unclear points, but also sharing what you understand and what piques your interest.

Theme	Studying International Relations from a Theoretical Analytical Perspective
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to equip students with the analytical frameworks, methods, and knowledge necessary to understand the past, present, and future of the international community. International Relations is a field of study deeply connected to our daily lives. As globalization advances, interactions between people living in different countries (both positive and negative) are constantly increasing. Moreover, events in the international community significantly impact our lives. War and conflict are obvious examples, but trade friction, pandemics, resource and energy issues, and climate change also profoundly affect our daily lives and economic activities. Therefore, studying International Relations is not merely an academic pursuit; it is an essential activity for improving the society we live in and enhancing our own lives. However, merely watching the international issues that arise daily does not lead to an understanding of international relations. To connect fragmented information and systematically understand international relations, a theoretical analytical framework is necessary. In this course, we will learn theoretical analytical frameworks for international relations while thinking together about the past, present, and future of international relations. *Content may be adjusted based on participants' level of understanding.
Prerequisites and Notes	We recommend taking this course alongside other international relations/international politics courses such as International Political Studies I, International Political Studies II, Foreign Policy, Comparative Political Science, and Political Geography (though this is not mandatory). Strongly recommended for students aiming for graduate programs in international relations or international politics. There are no "right answers" in this course. Objectively analyzing diverse information and maintaining an open-minded attitude toward opinions differing from your own will be highly valued. If you encounter news articles related to what you learn in class, please write down the main points of the news and your own opinions in your notebook. This will definitely be useful during your job search.

Theme	Who decides and implements a nation's foreign policy, for what purposes, and how?
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to provide an understanding of the mechanisms by which a nation's foreign policy is formulated and implemented. In International Politics I, the state is regarded as the most fundamental actor and is the subject of observation and analysis. Furthermore, states are thought to pursue national interests rationally, cooperating with or opposing other states. However, in the real world, the state as an actor does not exist. It is always humans, and organizations composed of humans, who determine and implement a state's foreign policy. Being human, they sometimes act rationally and sometimes do not. Moreover, while there are differences in the activities of organizations composed of humans, there are also many commonalities. This course will focus on the state as a unit while also paying attention to organizations composed of individuals. We will discuss the mechanisms by which foreign policy is formed and implemented. In the latter part of the course, we will analyze the foreign policies of the United States, Japan, and China, which influence the order in the Asia-Pacific region. Additionally, we plan to introduce current affairs issues in the Asia-Pacific region during the lectures. The content may be adjusted based on the level of understanding demonstrated by the students.

Theme	Exploring the Intersection of International Politics and Geography from a Geopolitical Perspective
Course Objectives and Overview	The purpose of this course is to learn how to understand international politics from the perspectives of geography and space. You've likely heard the term "geopolitics" somewhere before. While we often use the word "geopolitics" without much thought, it actually encompasses diverse interpretations and analyses from various perspectives. To oversimplify, geopolitics is the discipline that explains the exercise of power and the distribution of interests from the perspectives of geography and space. By viewing flat international politics in three dimensions, geopolitics can sometimes provide clear-cut answers explaining conflicts and rivalries, while at other times it becomes a tool to arbitrarily justify the validity of policies or strategies. This course provides a space for you to learn about the history, theories, and methods of geopolitics, and to engage in discussion. Specifically, the first half of the course will consist of lectures by the instructor based on the textbook and reference materials. In the latter half, students will analyze global issues from a geopolitical perspective, followed by presentations and discussions. Decisions regarding case selection and presentation order will be made collaboratively during class.

Grade	G3	Teaching Method	Lecture
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Course
Theme	Acquire foundational knowledge of international law and learn to interpret news from Japan and around the world.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course is an advanced version of "International Society and Law," which teaches foundational knowledge of international law. The first half covers fundamental knowledge in areas directly related to global challenges (such as territory and oceans, environment, international crime, and international economics). Building on this, the second half applies this basic knowledge by examining specific countries, regions, and themes. For example, hate crime cases can be addressed through multiple fields such as international human rights law, international humanitarian law, and international criminal law. In this way, we will examine practical and flexible interpretations, applications, and remedies of law, prioritizing problem-solving.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Acquire foundational knowledge of international law. 2. Be able to explain cases from an international law perspective using foundational knowledge of international law. 3. Be able to examine and analyze the potential and limitations of solving problems through the integrated application of international law and its institutions.
Support for Qualification and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	Each class session will include questions related to the lesson content, and students will submit a reflection paper at the end of the class. These reflection papers will be used for review during the next class session to ensure interactivity in the course.

Theme	Acquire fundamental knowledge of taxation and consider fairer and more optimal tax systems
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to deepen students' understanding of Japan's tax system by learning fundamental concepts and knowledge about taxation and comparing tax systems and tax policies in Japan and other countries. Specifically, students will learn fundamental principles of taxation such as fairness, neutrality, and simplicity. Through cross-sectional comparisons of tax systems and policies in major Asian countries (including Japan) and OECD member states, students will identify issues within existing tax systems (particularly personal income tax and consumption tax) in Japan and other countries. Students will develop the ability to examine appropriate tax systems tailored to each country's social circumstances. Another objective is to develop multifaceted observational skills and the ability to understand the societies of major Asian countries.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Tax systems are indispensable institutions that exist as part of the fiscal system necessary for a nation to procure, manage, and utilize the financial resources required for various activities such as politics, economics, diplomacy, and education. Tax systems take various forms due to differences in the historical, cultural, political, and economic development of each country. By comprehensively comparing the tax systems and tax policies of major Asian countries, including Japan, and OECD member countries, based on fundamental principles of taxation such as fairness, neutrality, and simplicity, students will identify issues and acquire foundational knowledge of taxation, with a focus on the development and reform of tax systems.

Theme	Realizing a Multicultural Coexistence Society Global Citizenship Challenges: Addressing Aging and the Care Economy, Fast Fashion, and Climate Change through Local Governance
Course Objectives and Overview	Japan has accepted 3.22 million foreign nationals (as of June 2023) without establishing a formal immigration system. The Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications has requested local governments to formulate guidelines for multicultural coexistence with foreign residents. 1. While touching on the history of the human rights movement for Zainichi Koreans and the 1982 ratification of the Refugee Convention, we will examine recent challenges such as ensuring Japanese language and mother tongue education for foreign children and administrative measures for multicultural coexistence. 2. As a form of municipal ODA, cross-border cooperation in waste sorting, water and sewage technology, and urban collaboration in transportation and environmental fields is being pursued, offering lessons on the significance of this new form of international cooperation. 3. Consider aging populations, fast fashion, and climate change from the perspective of global citizenship.

This subject's coursework	Coordinated by Professor Sugawara of the Faculty of International Studies, this omnibus course features guest lectures by Mr. Kunio Nishiwaki (former Osaka Prefectural Assembly member) and Mr. KANATANI Ichiro (former ward mayor of Osaka City). Mr. Nishiwaki and Mr. KANATANI Ichiro deliver practical lessons sharing their respective field activities. Japan was once an immigrant nation. From Okinawa alone, 160,000 people emigrated to Brazil and Peru, building Japanese-Brazilian and Japanese-Peruvian communities. We hope students will learn from this history while also developing an interest in multicultural coexistence initiatives undertaken by local governments and international cooperation efforts known as municipal ODA. Acquiring the mindset of multicultural coexistence also cultivates an international standard of human rights awareness.

Instructor	KANEKO Jihei	Year of Offering	34
Subject Numbering	Please refer to the following for subject numbering. https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/numbering.html	Credit Hours	2 credits
Grade	G4	Teaching Method	Lecture
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	To clarify poverty and related economic and social issues in developing countries, and to consider what measures should be taken to achieve economic development
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to provide foundational knowledge for understanding the socio-economic problems causing poverty in developing countries and exploring solutions. Each lecture will follow the lesson plan for that session, but may be modified as appropriate based on students' prior knowledge and level of understanding.
Prerequisites and Notes	This is an in-person course. The following post-class learning is required: • After class, review the lecture materials by rereading them multiple times (minimum 30 minutes)(※1) • Complete the questionnaire for that lecture's content (※2) (approx. 5 minutes) • Take a short quiz (※3) on the previous lecture's content (approx. 15 minutes) ※ 1 Each set of lecture materials is 4 to 8 pages long in Japanese (A4 size). Even for those who can read Japanese fluently, this may take 30 minutes; for those less proficient in Japanese, it may take over 2 hours. ※ 2 The questionnaire will be completed at the end of the test in the "Learning Portal". Responses should not be simple "understood" or "didn't understand", but specific comments related to that lecture. ※ 3 The test score, including the questionnaire, accounts for 60 points out of a total possible score of 100 points. With 15 lectures, the points added per test are approximately 4 points. Therefore, achieving a good score on each test is a requirement for passing.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	• Explain the characteristics of macroeconomic indicators such as GDP in developing countries. • Understand and explain the current status and challenges in developing countries regarding capital, labor, and technology from both micro and macro perspectives. • Can use the above knowledge to consider strategies for reducing poverty in developing countries.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	Questions are accepted via Teams. • Questions relevant to all students will be addressed during the following week's (or the week after that's) class. • For questions not relevant to all students, responses will be provided via Teams or email within 2-3 days.

This subject's coursework Taking this course	The first step in regional studies is having an interest in the target country or region. The Faculty of International Studies plans to conduct field projects in South Korea and Malaysia during the summer vacation of 2025. It is essential to learn about the target countries before participating in the field projects. Please attend with enthusiasm. Grades for this course will be based on active participation in class and the final term paper. For the final term paper, students will write and submit a paper of approximately 4,000 characters. This paper should cover one of the following: an area of interest developed in class regarding the politics, economy, society, or culture of Korea or Malaysia; or a topic they wish to research (or have learned about) during the field project.

This subject's coursework Taking this course	The first step in regional studies is having an interest in the target country or region. The Faculty of International Studies plans to conduct field projects in South Korea and Malaysia during the summer vacation of 2025. It is essential to learn about the target countries before participating in the field projects. Please attend with enthusiasm. Grades for this course will be based on active participation in class and the final term paper. For the final term paper, students will write and submit a paper of approximately 4,000 characters. This paper should cover one of the following: an area of interest developed in class regarding the politics, economy, society, or culture of Korea or Malaysia; or a topic they wish to research (or have learned about) during the field project.

Course Title	Contemporary Economic Issues (in English)	Year Offered	2025
Instructor	IMAI Kenichi	Year of Offering	34
Subject Numbering	Please refer to the following for subject numbering. https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/numbering.html	Credit Hours	2 credits
Grade	G4	Teaching Method	Lecture
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Course
Theme	Study economic trends and their background in Japan and abroad in English.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course examines economic trends and their underlying factors in Japan and abroad using English. Specifically, students will learn the meanings of fundamental economic terms encountered in daily life, such as "prices," "employment," "consumption and savings," "investment," "financial institutions," and "Foreign Exchange Theory," in English. While acquiring these basic economic terms in English, students will also study related economic phenomena occurring in Japan and abroad, along with their backgrounds, using English. The course will not only examine various economic phenomena occurring within Japan using Japan as a case study, but will also broaden the perspective to Asia and the world, studying economic trends at the regional and global levels.
Prerequisites and Notes	(Prerequisites): This course requires English proficiency equivalent to a TOEIC score of 600 or higher, or comparable ability (e.g., the ability to read and understand economic-related English online news articles of approximately 400 words and concisely summarize them in about three lines of English). If you are unsure whether you meet this requirement, please consult with the instructor during the first class session.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please check the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	The primary learning objectives for this course are as follows: 1. Understand the meaning of basic economic terms and be able to explain their meaning concisely in English. 2. Accurately understand and create English-language charts and graphs related to economics. 3. Understand economic trends and their background in Japan encountered in daily life and explain their overview in English. 4. Apply Japanese case studies to research and analyze economic trends and their background in one's own country, summarize the results in a report (approximately 400 words in English), and explain them in English. 5. Investigate and analyze economic trends and their background in an Asian region or globally that interests you, summarize the results in a report (approximately 800 characters in English), and explain it in English.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	For assigned themes in class, students will conduct research and analysis, create an English summary of their findings, and deliver an English presentation (including Q&A and discussion). Through this process, students will enhance their English skills, deepen their understanding of economic themes covered in class, and broaden their perspective on the themes by listening to presentations by other students.

Theme	Students learn about organizational environmental adaptation and management strategy through case studies of actual corporate activities. Students will learn content designed to prepare them for advanced specialized courses in the field of business administration.
Course Objectives and Overview	Companies cannot maintain or survive unless they can respond appropriately to constantly changing business environments. Organizational environmental adaptation behavior is explained by the "Environmental Change (E) · Management Strategy (S) · Organizational Structure (S) · Management Process (P) = ESSP Model" framework. Among these factors, business strategy exerts the strongest influence on an organization's environmental adaptation behavior. This course will cover the fundamental concepts and theories of business strategy, studying it holistically by integrating environment, strategy, organization, and management. The goal is to enhance understanding of corporate behavior and contribute to its improvement.
Prerequisites and Notes	This course is an advanced specialized subject. It is recommended for students who wish to study management strategy from an international perspective. It is also recommended that students acquire foundational knowledge in areas such as Business Management and Management Organization beforehand.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	• Be able to explain fundamental concepts and theories related to business strategy in a professional manner. • Evaluate the appropriateness of diverse strategic actions taken by companies and propose improvements. • Analyze the relationship between strategic actions and environmental trends, organizational structure, and management control.

This course this course	Business strategy is the most crucial factor in explaining corporate behavior. It is no exaggeration to say that the success or failure of a company’s survival hinges on the business strategy formulated by its management. Business strategy requires the ability to recognize, interpret, and judge both environmental changes (external factors) and the company’s own organizational capabilities (internal factors). Therefore, it necessitates a thorough understanding and insight into both the external and internal factors of the organization.

Lecture	Class Format	Course Plan	Pre- and Post-Class Learning (Preparation, Review, etc.)	Pre- and Post-Class Study Time
Session 1	In-Person	"Orientation" Based on the course syllabus, this session explains the purpose and objectives of the course, how classes will be conducted, and grading criteria. This subject is required for about	Understanding "work" is crucial for students about to enter society. It will also be useful for internships and job hunting. Furthermore, depending on the industry, you may need to manage diverse teams from a young age. Among business administration courses, this one will be most applicable in your practical work after employment. Working is a frequent topic in newspapers, magazines, news, and documentaries. Develop a broad interest in these sources, and also take various opportunities to ask people you know who are working about what their workplace is like. In class, depending on the number of students enrolled, I plan to begin each session by having individual conversations about the theme. Therefore, please make sure to prepare for each session's theme without fail.

Subject Numbering	Please refer to the following for subject numbering. https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/numbering.html	Credit Hours	2 credits
Grade	G4	Teaching Method	Lecture
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Course
Theme	What is Corporate Social Responsibility? Learn from the perspectives of CSR and SDGs, while simultaneously acquiring knowledge about the causes of corporate scandals and misconduct and measures to prevent them.
Course Objectives and Overview	• Today, corporations are evaluated not only from an economic perspective but also from a social perspective. While emphasis was traditionally placed on cultural aspects like corporate patronage (mecenat), modern corporations face heightened scrutiny over the importance of CSR (Corporate Social Responsibility). Addressing SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals) and ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) investment have become critical management challenges. Specifically, we will study historical contexts and discuss contemporary issues facing corporations, including: ① Environment, ② Human Rights, ③ Labor, ④ Corporate Ethics and Fraud, ⑤ Gender, ⑥ Minorities and LGBT, ⑦ Harassment, and ⑧ Fraud and Scandals. • Therefore, the first half will focus on acquiring foundational knowledge, while the second half will address contemporary corporate challenges through discussion. For each topic, students are expected to read articles and literature, form their own opinions, and participate actively in class.
Prerequisites and Considerations	• Students must acquire foundational knowledge while understanding that absolute "justice" does not exist. • A sincere willingness to engage with contemporary issues.
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	① Understand the fundamentals of CSR and be able to explain what CSR is. ② Be able to explain related concepts such as corporate philanthropy, ESG investing, SDGs, and corporate ethics; identify challenges; and articulate one's own opinions and reasons. ③ Explain why social responsibility is important in addition to a company's economic performance.
Preparation for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	• Basic knowledge will be assessed through midterm tests or quizzes, with individual feedback provided. • Discussion techniques will receive specific feedback during class. • Report-related issues (structure, expression, etc.) will be addressed separately.
Active Learning Initiatives	Discussion, Debate, Deliberation / Presentation, Announcement, Report
Courses Taught by Instructors with Practical Experience	The instructor for this course has over 35 years of experience at a major automobile company, including five overseas assignments. Their practical experience includes establishing a local subsidiary in China, sales planning, international trade, as well as production management and human resources/labor management. This course leverages these practical experiences.

This subject's coursework will focus	We will focus on the "social nature" of corporations. We recommend this course to those interested in CSR, ESG investing, SDGs, and corporate ethics. By taking this course, I hope you will gain an understanding of the challenges surrounding corporations—such as environmental issues, human rights issues, labor issues (including overwork deaths and child labor), fraud, and discrimination—which are frequently reported in the news, as well as their relationships with stakeholders (shareholders, customers, suppliers, employees, government agencies, NPOs/NGOs, etc.). I also hope you will develop your own opinions (arguments). Having confronted these issues from within corporations, I intend to proceed by formalizing this experiential knowledge.

Regarding taking this course	English is not the only common language in international business. "Accounting" is also called a common language in international business. Accounting expresses corporate activities in numerical values and provides this information to those who need it. While details vary, the fundamental items are largely common across many countries. Furthermore, because it is expressed in numbers, once you understand the items, you can comprehend corporate activities regardless of your native language. Therefore, "Accounting" is extremely important knowledge for succeeding in the international business arena. Students who wish to succeed in the international business arena should take this course.

Theme	Theories and Realities of International Politics I
Course Objectives and Overview	This seminar analyzes various international issues from the perspective of International Politics I, examining the past, present, and future of the international community. While the primary focus of analysis is international relations in the Asia-Pacific region, it also addresses international issues in other regions and emerging fields (such as cybersecurity). International Politics I, particularly East Asian international relations, profoundly impacts our lives. In today's deepening globalization, not only the activities of public institutions and corporations but also our personal safety and security are affected by shifts in the international situation. While staying informed about daily current events is crucial, merely acquiring information does not equate to understanding International Politics I. In this seminar, participants will read specialized texts and collections of papers in International Politics I, engage in repeated discussions, and thereby acquire knowledge related to International Politics I while simultaneously mastering analytical methods in the field. The content may be adjusted based on participants' comprehension levels and requests.

Theme	Study politics, economics, and society from the perspective of global history.
Course Objectives and Overview	The objective is to conduct comprehensive learning that critically analyzes and examines the knowledge and theories concerning politics, economics, and society acquired through previous seminars, lectures, overseas experiences, and other courses, from the perspective of global history. Specifically, this involves the following two points: ① Refine third-year students' skills in Reading and Comprehension I, understanding, identifying issues, and presentation through activities such as group reading of primary sources. ② Investigate and analyze themes related to politics, economics, and society from a global history perspective. Furthermore, deepen understanding of the investigation and analysis content and solidify learning outcomes through discussions among instructors and enrolled students.

Theme	Study Japanese culture and comparative culture.
Course Objectives and Overview	In today's increasingly global society, cross-border interactions grow year by year. For those who will work in Japanese workplaces, deeply understanding the characteristics of Japanese culture and being able to explain them in English to foreigners is a crucial challenge. This specialized seminar explores the characteristics of Japanese culture. We will examine current cultural phenomena and also consider pre-modern cultural aspects for deeper understanding. Furthermore, from an international comparative perspective, we will compare Japanese culture with that of other countries (or one's own country). This seminar will be conducted primarily in English. Materials will include close reading of texts from literature on Japanese culture, paired work, group work, and student presentations in English. Through the learning and practice in this specialized seminar, we aim to build the strong "Inter-Cultural Understanding" skills demanded in today's workplace.

Theme	Develop the ability to analyze literature focusing on the economies of the Asia-Pacific region, and determine a Graduation Study topic
Course Objectives and Overview	Specialized Seminar II A/B aims to develop the following abilities: interpreting materials and literature related to economic phenomena; understanding economic phenomena from tables and graphs; presenting data clearly in tables and graphs; and examining economic phenomena through data. Specifically: • Deepening understanding of social phenomena, particularly economic ones, by carefully reading literature while researching unfamiliar terms • Through reading books and papers, students will deeply study phenomena that interest them and identify research questions Through these activities, students determine their Graduation Study topics and challenges. Additionally, as needed, • Learning how to use computers to clearly present data in tables and figures • Learning to create tables and graphs from existing survey data • Learning survey research methods are also objectives. Students particularly interested in learning about data handling or survey research should request to participate in learning activities outside of class hours.

Regarding taking this course Through taking this course	Through this course, I hope you will develop a cultural attitude recognizing that individuals possess their own values as distinct persons, not as representatives of "nations" or "races," and that these values deserve equal respect. Building on this foundation, let us explore together how cultures within various groups are represented through media and other channels, and what effects these representations produce.

Class Session	Class Format	Lesson Plan	Pre- and Post-Class Learning (Preparation, Review, etc.)	Pre- and Post-Class Study Time
Session 1	In-Person	Introduction Explain the course objectives, grading criteria, and an overview of the semester's schedule.	As post-class learning, carefully examine what kind of study plan you will create for the entire semester and whether it is feasible. Also, search for keywords of interest from newspapers, books, etc., and gather information related to them.	4 hours
Session 2	In-Person	Toward Research on "Culture" ① Examine definitions of "culture" proposed by various researchers, drawing on your own personal experiences.	Before class: Read the distributed handout in advance. After class: Review the handout content and summarize your own definition of "culture" in your own words.	4 hours
Session 3	In-Person	Toward Studying "Culture" Part 2 Examine the process by which "representation" is formed through media.	Before class: Read the distributed handout in advance. After class: Review the handout content and summarize your own thoughts on the formation of cultural "representation" in your own words.	4 hours
Session 4	In-Person	Toward Studying "Culture" ③ To grasp the concept of "culture" research, introduce the content of an actual academic paper.	Before class: Read the distributed handout in advance. After class: Review the handout content and summarize the main points of the text in your own words.	4 hours
Session 5	In-Person	Presentation of Assigned Literature (1) Read assigned literature related to "culture." Specifically, students will give presentations, and group work will be conducted to discuss various issues.	Read the assigned texts as instructed in class. Presenters should prepare for their in-class presentation, while other students should compile questions or points they don't understand. As a review, revisit the assigned texts and the presenter's report materials.	4 hours

Session 6	In-Person	Presentation of Assigned Literature (2) Read assigned literature related to "culture." Specifically, students will give presentations, and group work will be conducted to examine various issues.	Read the assigned texts as instructed in class. Presenters should prepare for their in-class presentations, while other students should compile questions and points they find unclear. As a review, revisit the assigned texts and the presenter's report materials.	4 hours

Grade	G3	Teaching Method	Seminar
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	Examine globalization and culture through knowledge and theories related to Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, international cultural studies, and International Sociology.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course aims to equip students with analytical methods and knowledge concerning immigration, identity, inequality, and related topics, using Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies as a foundation. Simultaneously, students will engage in research and investigation using Sociology methodologies. Furthermore, the course aims to teach the entire process from setting individual research themes, conducting literature reviews and analysis, to presenting research findings. Through group work, students will develop communication skills, collaborative abilities, leadership, and problem-identification skills, while also preparing for their Graduation Thesis writing.
Prerequisites and Notes	Seminar courses serve as comprehensive learning opportunities where students apply knowledge and theories acquired in lectures to analyze and examine global societal issues. Students conduct research on specific themes based on their interests, developing proactive attitudes and orientations through the process while enhancing creative thinking skills. Seminars actively incorporate experiential learning and active learning methods to develop "international collaborative skills" such as initiative, teamwork, leadership, and action-oriented capabilities. The "Seminar Courses" are assigned as follows: "Foundation Seminar A" in the first year, "Foundation Seminar B" in the first year, "Specialized Seminar I A" and "Specialized Seminar I B" in the second year, "Specialized Seminar II A" and "Specialized Seminar II B" in the third year, and "Specialized Seminar III A" and "Specialized Seminar III B" in the fourth year. While emphasizing the development of abilities required of global talent, academic and career guidance is also provided, culminating in the writing of a Graduation Thesis.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Apply knowledge and theories regarding Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies acquired through lectures and other courses to globalization and culture. Deepen understanding through analysis and critical examination. Students will learn the entire process from selecting their own theme, conducting research and analysis, to presenting research findings. They will determine their graduation thesis topic and write a 3,000-character research report.
Preparation for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	For group research projects, provide appropriate comments and advice regarding methodology and research approaches, offering constructive feedback. For presentations and reports, provide comments and suggestions for improvement.

Theme	Theories and Realities of International Politics I
Course Objectives and Overview	This seminar analyzes various international issues from the perspective of International Politics I, examining the past, present, and future of the international community. While the primary focus of analysis is international relations in the Asia-Pacific region, it also addresses international issues in other regions and emerging fields (such as cybersecurity). International Politics I, particularly East Asian international relations, profoundly impacts our lives. In today's deepening globalization, not only the activities of public institutions and corporations but also our personal safety and security are affected by shifts in the international situation. While staying informed about daily current events is crucial, merely acquiring information does not equate to understanding International Politics I. In this seminar, participants will read specialized texts and collections of papers in International Politics I, engage in repeated discussions, and thereby acquire knowledge related to International Politics I while simultaneously mastering analytical methods in the field. The content may be adjusted based on participants' comprehension levels and requests.

Theme	Study politics, economics, and society from the perspective of global history.
Course Objectives and Overview	The objective is to conduct comprehensive learning that critically analyzes and examines the knowledge and theories regarding politics, economics, and society acquired through previous seminars, lectures, overseas experiences, and other courses from a global history perspective. Specifically, this involves the following two points: ① Hone third-year students' abilities in text interpretation, comprehension, issue identification, and presentation through activities such as group reading of primary sources. ② Investigate and analyze themes related to politics, economics, and society from a global history perspective. Furthermore, through discussions among faculty and students, deepen understanding of the investigated and analyzed content and solidify learning outcomes.

Theme	Study Japanese culture and comparative culture.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course builds upon "Specialized Seminar II A," aiming to narrow down individual research themes and deepen analysis. In today's increasingly global society, cross-border interactions grow year by year. For those who will work in Japanese workplaces, deeply understanding the characteristics of Japanese culture and explaining them in English to foreigners is a crucial challenge. This seminar explores the features of Japanese culture. We will consider not only current cultural phenomena but also delve into the culture of pre-modern times. Furthermore, from an international comparative perspective, we will compare Japanese culture with that of other countries (or one's own country). This seminar will be conducted primarily in English. Materials will include close reading of texts from literature on Japanese culture, paired work, group work, and student presentations in English. Through the learning and practice in this specialized seminar, we also aim to build the strong "Inter-Cultural Understanding" skills demanded in modern workplaces.

Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Objectives	In the first half of the course, individual students will give presentations based on materials related to Japanese culture and comparative culture. In the latter half, students will form groups, conduct research on specific themes, and synthesize their findings for presentations. Through group activities such as group discussions, students will develop initiative, teamwork, leadership, and other skills.

Theme	Develop the ability to read and comprehend literature centered on the economies of the Asia-Pacific region, while also deeply reading and examining literature relevant to Graduation Study.
Course Objectives and Overview	Specialized Seminar II A/B aims to develop the following abilities: interpreting materials and literature related to economic phenomena; understanding economic phenomena from tables and graphs; presenting data clearly in tables and graphs; and examining economic phenomena through data. Specifically: • Deepening understanding of social phenomena, particularly economic ones, by carefully reading literature while researching unfamiliar terms • Through reading books and papers, students will deeply study phenomena that interest them and identify research questions Through these activities, students determine their Graduation Study topics and challenges. Additionally, as needed, • Learning how to use computers to clearly present data in tables and figures • Learning to create tables and figures from existing survey data • Learning survey research methods are also objectives. Students particularly interested in learning about data handling or survey research should request to participate in learning activities outside of class hours.

Regarding taking this course Through taking this course	Through this course, I hope you will develop a cultural attitude recognizing that individuals possess their own values as distinct persons, not as representatives of "nations" or "races," and that these values deserve equal respect. Building on this foundation, let us explore together how cultures within various groups are represented through media and other channels, and what effects these representations produce.

Theme	Examine globalization and culture through knowledge and theories related to Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies
Course Objectives and Overview	This course follows "Specialized Seminar IIA" and aims to teach students the entire process—from setting a theme, conducting research and analysis, to presenting research findings—by learning knowledge related to a specific theme within their specialized field and engaging in research and investigation. Students select a theme based on their individual research interests and prepare a research report on that topic. Furthermore, through group work, the course aims to develop communication skills, collaborative abilities and leadership, and problem-identification skills.
Prerequisites and Notes	Seminar courses serve as comprehensive learning opportunities where students apply knowledge and theories acquired in lectures and other courses to analyze and examine global societal issues. Students conduct research on specific themes aligned with their interests, developing proactive attitudes and orientations through this process while enhancing their creative thinking skills. Seminars actively incorporate experiential learning and active learning methods to cultivate "international collaborative skills" such as initiative, teamwork, leadership, and action-oriented capabilities. The "Seminar Courses" are assigned as follows: "Foundation Seminar A" in the first year, "Foundation Seminar B" in the first year, "Specialized Seminar I A" and "Specialized Seminar I B" in the second year, "Specialized Seminar II A" and "Specialized Seminar II B" in the third year, and "Specialized Seminar III A" and "Specialized Seminar III B" in the fourth year. While emphasizing the development of abilities required of global talent, academic and career guidance is also provided, culminating in the writing of a Graduation Thesis.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Apply knowledge and theories learned in lecture courses regarding Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies to globalization and culture, conducting analysis and critical examination. Students will learn the entire process from selecting their own theme, conducting research and analysis, to presenting research findings. They will determine their graduation thesis topic and write a 5,000-word graduation report.

For this course We welcome students who are interested in various languages themselves and in phenomena related	We welcome students interested in the diverse languages of the world and phenomena related to language. Through close reading of academic papers and specialized texts, we will explore approaches to understanding language as a research subject and research methodologies. We expect each student to bring their own "question" and, through the course, seek their unique "answer."

Class Sessions	Class Format	Course Plan	Pre- and Post-Class Learning (Preparation/Review, etc.)
Session 1	In-Person	Introduction Explain the course objectives, goals, and overall structure.	As pre-class learning, an assignment paper on linguistics will be posted on the learning portal. Read it beforehand and grasp the main points. As post-class learning, summarize the overview in a report and submit it to the learning portal.	4 hours
Session 2	In-Person	Theme Exploration ① Through presentations and discussions by students, examine individual themes for investigation, analysis, and consideration.	Students will deepen themes based on their individual interests and concerns beforehand, adding specificity to their set themes. Reflect the content of class discussions on individual theme development and adjust the direction of one's own research.	4 hours
Session 3	In-Person	Theme Exploration ② Through presentations and discussions by enrolled students, examine individual themes for investigation, analysis, and consideration.	Presenters must prepare and submit a summary of their presentation content in advance. After class, I adjust the direction of my research based on the discussions and comments made during the session.	4 hours
Session 4	In-Person	Theme Review ③ Through presentations and discussions by enrolled students, examine individual themes for investigation, analysis, and consideration.	Presenters must prepare and submit a summary of their presentation content in advance. After class, students will revise their research plans based on the discussions and feedback received during the session.	4 hours
Session 5	In-Person	Theme Exploration ④ Through presentations and discussions by enrolled students, examine individual themes for investigation, analysis, and consideration.	Presenters must prepare and submit a summary of their presentation content in advance. After class, students will revise their research plans based on the discussions and feedback received during the session.	4 hours

Requirements for this course For this course	I aim to create a participatory lecture where each student brings their own "question" and seeks their own "answer" through the course. Therefore, I encourage you to actively voice any questions or interests that arise during class. Complete your Graduation Study and compile it into a Graduation Thesis or graduation report. Presentations and report submissions are required during the semester. Additionally, both the presentation and report are conditions for receiving a grade.

Session 6	In-person	Discussions among instructors and students to explore individual research and analysis themes.	Preparation for Individual Presentations: e.g., Research Methods and Schedule	2 hours
Session 7	On-demand	Data analysis methods and approaches to consideration	Preparation for Midterm Presentation: Research Findings and Analysis Results, etc.	4 hours
Session 8	In-Person	Interim Presentation of Research Projects (1) Present the results of the research project at the interim presentation. Faculty and students engage in discussion to explore the creation of the final research project outcomes, serving as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours

Session 9	In-person	Interim Presentation of Research Project (2) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research project outcomes as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 10	In-Person	Interim Presentation of Research Project (3) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research outcomes as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 11	In-Person	Interim Presentation of Research Project (4) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research outcomes as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 12	In-Person	Interim Presentation of Research Project (5) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research outcomes as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 13	In-Person	Interim Presentation of Research Projects (6) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research outcomes as the culmination of undergraduate studies.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 14	In-person	Interim Presentation of Research Projects (7) Present interim research findings, engage in discussion with faculty and fellow students, and deliberate on creating the final research outcomes for this project—the culminating undergraduate research endeavor.	Preparation for the interim presentation: Survey results, analysis findings, etc. After class, revise your research based on feedback received during the session	6 hours
Session 15	In-person	Summary Conduct a comprehensive review of the entire course.	Put the material covered during the semester into writing and advance the creation of the thesis. (Target: approximately 7,000 characters)	6 hours

Theme	Examining various global issues related to people (such as discrimination based on race or gender, modern slavery and child labor, refugees, child soldiers, climate change, and marine plastic pollution) from the perspective of international law.
Course Objectives and Overview	Students apply knowledge and theories of law and politics acquired in lecture courses to international legal policies addressing global challenges (human rights, environment, international crime, anti-corruption, armed conflict, etc.), conducting analysis and critical examination to achieve comprehensive learning. In the first half of the course, each student presents on the content and mechanisms of international public policy and explores research themes for their thesis project. In the latter half, students conduct research on international public policies addressing current global issues and synthesize their findings for an interim thesis presentation. Through discussions, students consolidate their learning, re-examine key issues, and prepare their thesis reports.

Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	This course aims to develop individual research projects through mutual exchange of opinions. Students will deepen their research by conducting literature reviews related to their themes and developing analyses based on this research. The results of the research projects will be presented in class and discussed among students. Through the course activities, students will enhance their abilities in conducting the entire process of research, analysis, and presentation, as well as their logical thinking skills, which they have acquired through previous studies.
Support for Qualification and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	Presentation materials and handouts should be submitted to the Learning Portal one week prior to the presentation. Instructors will review and edit them, providing feedback. Furthermore, for Graduation Study, feedback will be provided by classmates and instructors following the midterm presentation in class. Feedback on submitted assignments will also be provided through the Learning Portal and during class sessions.

Subject Numbering	Please refer to the following for subject numbering. https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/numbering.html	Credit Hours	2 credits
Grade	G4	Teaching Method	Seminar
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	Examine globalization and culture through knowledge and theories related to Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies
Course Objectives and Overview	This course builds upon "Specialized Seminar IIB," aiming to teach students the entire process—from setting a theme, conducting research and analysis, to presenting research findings—by learning knowledge related to a specific theme within their specialized field and engaging in their own investigation and research. Students advance their research based on their individual research interests. Furthermore, through group work, students develop communication skills, collaborative abilities and leadership, and problem-identification skills.
Prerequisites and Notes	Seminar courses serve as comprehensive learning opportunities where students apply knowledge and theories acquired in lecture courses to analyze and examine global societal issues. Students conduct research on specific themes aligned with their interests, developing proactive attitudes and orientations through this process while enhancing their creative thinking skills. Seminars actively incorporate experiential learning and active learning methods to cultivate "international collaborative skills" such as initiative, teamwork, leadership, and action-oriented capabilities. The "Seminar" course sequence is structured as follows: "Foundation Seminar A" in the first year, "Foundation Seminar B" in the first year, "Specialized Seminar I A" and "Specialized Seminar I B" in the second year, "Specialized Seminar II A" and "Specialized Seminar II B" in the third year, and "Specialized Seminar III A" and "Specialized Seminar III B" in the fourth year. While emphasizing the development of abilities required of global talent, academic and career guidance is also provided, culminating in the writing of a Graduation Thesis.
Relation to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Apply knowledge and theories gained over three years in Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies to globalization and culture, conducting analysis and critical examination. Students will be able to present their own research themes using evidence. Students will be able to communicate their own perspectives and engage in discussion regarding others' research themes and presentations. Synthesize content for one's own presentation and write an 8,000-character Graduation Thesis.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Methods	For group research, provide appropriate comments and advice on methodology and research methods as feedback. For presentations and reports, offer comments and suggestions for improvement.

Theme	Study Japanese culture and comparative culture.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course builds upon "Specialized Seminar II B," aiming to narrow down individual research themes and deepen analysis. In today's increasingly global society, cross-border interactions grow annually. For those entering Japanese workplaces, deeply understanding Japanese cultural characteristics and explaining them to foreigners in English is crucial. This seminar examines these cultural features, considering both contemporary phenomena and pre-modern eras for deeper insight. Furthermore, from an international comparative perspective, we will compare Japanese culture with that of other countries (or one's own country). This seminar will be conducted primarily in English. Materials will include close reading of texts from literature on Japanese culture, paired work, group work, and student presentations in English. Through the learning and practice in this specialized seminar, we also aim to build the strong "Inter-Cultural Understanding" skills demanded in modern workplaces.

Theme	Theories and Realities of International Politics I
Course Objectives and Overview	This seminar analyzes various international issues from the perspective of International Politics I, examining the past, present, and future of the international community. While the primary focus of analysis is international relations in the Asia-Pacific region, it also addresses international issues in other regions and emerging fields (such as cybersecurity). International Politics I, particularly East Asian international relations, profoundly impacts our lives. In today's deepening globalization, not only the activities of public institutions and corporations but also our personal safety and security are affected by shifts in the international situation. While staying informed about daily current events is crucial, merely acquiring information does not equate to understanding International Politics I. In this seminar, participants will read specialized texts and collections of papers in International Politics I, engage in repeated discussions, and thereby acquire knowledge related to International Politics I while simultaneously mastering analytical methods in the field. The content may be adjusted based on participants' comprehension levels and requests.

Theme	Examination of the Peace Treaty and Security
Course Objectives and Overview	Continuing from the third-year seminar, this seminar examines peace and security from the perspective of International Politics I. A major objective of this final-year seminar is the completion of the Graduation Study. Therefore, during the first half of the 15 sessions, students will set their Graduation Study topics and read relevant prior research. Students will then present an overview of the prior research they have read, and their understanding will be tested. From the midpoint onward, students will give interim presentations on their Graduation Study.

Theme	Study politics, economics, and society from the perspective of global history.
Course Objectives and Overview	Building upon the content of Specialized Seminar II A and B, this course aims to study contemporary Asian issues from a historical perspective. Through analysis and examination, students will develop their own research projects. Students will deepen their research by conducting literature reviews related to their themes and developing their analysis based on this research. The results of the research projects will be presented in class (either individually or in groups), followed by discussions among students under faculty guidance.

Theme	Examine the utilization of information in the context of globalizing corporate management.
Course Objectives and Overview	Building upon "Specialized Seminar III A," this course involves research projects based on specialized themes. Students will present interim findings and, through class discussions, clarify specific issues requiring further examination. Furthermore, students will further enhance their ability to carry out the entire process of research, analysis, and presentation, as well as their logical thinking skills. As the culmination of undergraduate studies, students will complete their research outcomes under faculty guidance. The course will foster a broader perspective on society and cultivate problem-identification skills, with the instructor maintaining thorough communication with enrolled students.

Theme	Examine globalization and culture through knowledge and theories related to Inter-Cultural Understanding, international relations, and international cultural studies
Course Objectives and Overview	This course builds upon "Specialized Seminar IIIA," aiming to teach students the entire process—from setting a theme, conducting research and analysis, to presenting research findings—by learning knowledge related to a specific theme within their specialized field and undertaking their own investigation and research. Students advance their research based on their individual research interests. They will write a 12,000-character Graduation Thesis.
Prerequisites and Notes	Seminar courses serve as comprehensive learning opportunities where students apply knowledge and theories acquired in lectures to analyze and examine global societal issues. Students conduct research on specific themes aligned with their interests, developing proactive attitudes and orientations through this process while enhancing their creative thinking skills. Seminars actively incorporate experiential learning and active learning methods to cultivate "international collaborative skills" such as initiative, teamwork, leadership, and action-oriented capabilities. The "Seminar" course sequence is as follows: "Foundation Seminar B" in the first year, "Specialized Seminar I A" and "Specialized Seminar I B" in the second year, "Specialized Seminar II A" and "Specialized Seminar II B" in the third year, and "Specialized Seminar III A" and "Specialized Seminar III B" in the fourth year. While emphasizing the development of abilities required of global talent, academic and career guidance is also provided, culminating in the writing of a Graduation Thesis.

Theme	Theories and Realities of International Politics I
Course Objectives and Overview	This seminar analyzes various international issues from the perspective of International Politics I, examining the past, present, and future of the international community. While the primary focus of analysis is international relations in the Asia-Pacific region, it also addresses international issues in other regions and emerging fields (such as cybersecurity). International Politics I, particularly East Asian international relations, profoundly impacts our lives. In today's deepening globalization, not only the activities of public institutions and corporations but also our personal safety and security are affected by shifts in the international situation. While staying informed about daily current events is crucial, merely acquiring information does not equate to understanding International Politics I. In this seminar, participants will read specialized texts and collections of papers in International Politics I, engage in repeated discussions, and thereby acquire knowledge related to International Politics I while simultaneously mastering analytical methods in the field. The content may be adjusted based on participants' comprehension levels and requests.

Theme	Study Japanese culture and comparative culture.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course builds upon "Specialized Seminar III A," aiming to narrow down individual research themes and deepen analysis. In today's increasingly global society, cross-border interactions grow annually. For those entering Japanese workplaces, deeply understanding Japanese cultural characteristics and explaining them to foreigners in English is crucial. This seminar examines these characteristics, considering both contemporary cultural phenomena and pre-modern eras. Furthermore, from an international comparative perspective, we will compare Japanese culture with that of other countries (or one's own country). This seminar will be conducted primarily in English. Materials will include close reading of texts from literature on Japanese culture, paired work, group work, and student presentations in English. Through the learning and practice in this specialized seminar, we also aim to build the strong "Inter-Cultural Understanding" skills demanded in modern workplaces.

Theme	Conduct graduation study and write a graduation research paper addressing issues related to finance in global business.
Course Objectives and Overview	Building upon "Specialized Seminar III A," this course involves conducting research on a specialized theme-based topic. Students will present interim findings and, through class discussions, clarify specific issues requiring further examination. Furthermore, students will further enhance their ability to carry out the entire process of research, analysis, and presentation, as well as their logical thinking skills. As the culmination of undergraduate studies, students will complete their research outcomes under faculty guidance. The course will foster a broader perspective on society and cultivate problem-identification skills, with the instructor maintaining thorough communication with enrolled students.

Theme	From the perspective of linguistics, which treats language itself as its subject of study, this course examines various issues related to language.
Course Objectives and Overview	Students advance academic research by applying knowledge and theories of linguistics acquired in previous lecture courses to various issues related to language. Building upon the themes explored in Specialized Seminar II A and continuing from Specialized Seminar III A, students aim to complete their individual Graduation Studies. During the course, students report on their progress as appropriate and engage in discussions to enhance the quality of their Graduation Thesis.

Theme	Writing a Graduation Thesis
Course Objectives and Overview	Based on reports and faculty guidance from "Seminar III A in Law and Politics and Seminar III B in Law and Politics," students will complete their Graduation Thesis. For details, be sure to refer to the 'Graduation Study Guide' issued at the beginning of the academic year. Students select a theme from the specialized field of their own seminar chosen in their third year. They complete the thesis by utilizing all of their information literacy, literature comprehension skills, verification and critical thinking abilities, writing skills, and their own concentration and perseverance. This thesis represents the culmination of their four years of university learning centered on International Studies. Through writing the Graduation Thesis, students deepen their specialized knowledge in International Sociology and develop the ability to tackle contemporary Sociology challenges necessary for success in the professional world.

Theme	Exploring Japanese Culture Past and Present (日本文化の過去と現在を見て考える)
Course Objectives and Overview	This field project aims to cultivate the "general knowledge" and "common sense" necessary for foreigners to thrive in Japan by deeply considering the connections between past and present Japanese culture and expanding knowledge about Japan. The primary learning objective is to observe traditional Japanese culture—manifested in art, literature, theater, architecture, and other phenomena—firsthand and reflect on its relevance to contemporary culture. Additionally, examining "Kamigata culture," the unique culture of Kansai and Osaka, serves as a key pillar of this learning experience.

Theme	Enhance interest in Taiwan and gain insights
Course Objectives and Overview	This field project consists of learning about Taiwan through pre- and post-departure study in Japan, followed by approximately one week of experiential learning and training overseas. Through intensive domestic study and various learning experiences and activities at the overseas training site—including academic study, exchange activities, and local fieldwork—the project aims to cultivate Inter-Cultural Understanding, communication skills, and collaborative abilities. Furthermore, the process of learning and experience seeks to cultivate international awareness and foster or enhance motivation for learning. Grading will be conducted by the instructor based on the degree of achievement of learning objectives, the content of the project report, and the results of the learning outcomes presentation.

Theme	Exploring Japanese Culture Past and Present（日本文化の過去と現在を見て考える）
Course Objectives and Overview	This field project aims to cultivate the "general knowledge" and "common sense" necessary for foreigners to thrive in Japan by deeply considering the connections between Japan's past and present cultures and expanding knowledge about Japan. The primary learning objective is to observe traditional Japanese culture—manifested in art, literature, theater, architecture, and other phenomena—firsthand and reflect on its relevance to contemporary culture. Additionally, examining "Kamigata culture," the unique culture of Kansai and Osaka, serves as a key pillar of this learning experience.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Be able to explain Japanese culture in English. 2. Recognize and explain important aspects of Japanese culture, particularly Osaka's culture, regardless of whether it is modern, contemporary, or pre-modern. 3. Understand the influence past cultures have had on contemporary Japanese culture. 4. Understand the impact of Japanese culture on Japan's "soft power."

Theme	Enhance interest in Taiwan and gain insights
Course Objectives and Overview	This field project consists of learning about Taiwan through pre-departure and post-return study in Japan, combined with approximately one week of experiential learning and training overseas. Through intensive domestic study and various learning experiences and activities overseas—including academic study, exchange activities, and local fieldwork—the project aims to cultivate Inter-Cultural Understanding, communication skills, and collaborative abilities. Furthermore, the process of learning and experience seeks to cultivate international awareness and foster or enhance motivation for learning. Grading will be conducted by the instructor based on the degree of achievement of learning objectives, the content of the project report, and the results of the learning outcomes presentation.

Theme	Exploring Japanese Culture Past and Present (日本文化の過去と現在を見て考える)
Course Objectives and Overview	This field project aims to cultivate the "general knowledge" and "common sense" necessary for foreigners to thrive in Japan by deeply considering the connections between past and present Japanese culture and expanding knowledge about Japan. The primary learning objective is to observe traditional Japanese culture—manifested in art, literature, theater, architecture, and other phenomena—firsthand and reflect on its relevance to contemporary culture. Additionally, examining "Kamigata culture," the unique culture of Kansai and Osaka, serves as a key pillar of this learning experience.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relevance to DP	For details on how this course relates to the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	1. Be able to explain Japanese culture in English. 2. Recognize and explain important aspects of Japanese culture, particularly Osaka's culture, regardless of whether it is modern, contemporary, or pre-modern. 3. Understand the influence past cultures have had on contemporary Japanese culture. 4. Understand the impact of Japanese culture on Japan's "soft power."

Theme	Understand the culture and social background of the study abroad destination and acquire the English language skills necessary for smooth communication on-site.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course, designed for one-semester study abroad, equips students with the fundamental knowledge and skills required for overseas study. In class, students conduct research and presentations on the local culture and social context to deepen their understanding of their destination. While aiming for comprehensive improvement in all four English skills, instruction focuses on strengthening output to acquire the minimum English proficiency necessary for communication abroad. Additionally, exposure to academic English cultivates the foundation needed to understand classes at their study abroad destination. Students also consider and discuss how their study abroad experience will contribute to their future careers, fostering awareness to organically connect these two aspects.
Prerequisites and Notes	Students planning to participate in the 2025 English-speaking country one-semester study abroad program (summer departure) must enroll in this course. Credit may not be granted if participation in the course is significantly low. If you do not take the July TOEIC exam, credits may not be granted.

Theme	Enhance English skills acquired through study abroad and connect study abroad experiences to career development and specialized coursework.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course, designed for students who have completed one semester of study abroad in an English-speaking country, aims to further enhance the English skills cultivated during their study abroad experience. It also explores how to connect this experience to career development and specialized coursework within their respective programs. Classes will focus on TOEIC test preparation to measure English proficiency growth and to develop the "practical English" acquired through study abroad, linking it to qualification attainment and international careers. Therefore, while classes emphasize listening and reading skills, they also comprehensively enhance all four English skills through activities such as writing reports about study abroad experiences, discussions, and debates conducted entirely in English.
Prerequisites and Notes	Students who participated in the 2025 Summer English-speaking Region 1-Semester Study Abroad Program must enroll in this course. Credit may not be granted if attendance is significantly low. If you do not take the March TOEIC test, credits may not be granted.
Relevance to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	The objectives for this course are set as follows: 1. Be able to explain the culture and social background of the study abroad destination based on personal experience 2. Gain a general understanding of complex texts and spoken discourse. 3. Explain how the study abroad experience relates to one's career and specialized coursework 4. Be able to explain their study abroad experience in English using slides

Theme	Designing Your Student Life with an Eye Toward the Future
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Development A, together with Career Development B, is a course designed to cultivate the employment competencies required of working adults while considering lifelong "ways of living, learning, and working (= career)" after graduation. Employment competencies refer to the abilities necessary for students to enhance their own qualities after graduation and achieve social and professional independence. Furthermore, it aims to foster an understanding of the competencies and attitudes required of global professionals, considering the post-graduation paths of International Studies students. This course cultivates employability by engaging students in projects centered on the themes of "Understanding Society, Understanding Industry and Business, and Understanding Occupations." This approach addresses the changing economic and social landscape in Japan and the progression of globalization, aiming to develop the social and occupational perspectives crucial for post-graduation career choices. Through this understanding, students set personal goals for future career formation and recognize key challenges to tackle during their university years. Furthermore, to envision their own career design within globalization, students will also tackle challenges such as: ① Understanding work styles based on Inter-Cultural Understanding and multicultural coexistence, ② Understanding the characteristics of overseas assignments, and ③ Understanding global careers within Japan.

Theme	Designing Your Student Life with an Eye Toward the Future
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Development B follows International Career Development A. It cultivates the employment competencies required of working adults while considering lifelong "ways of living, learning, and working (= career)" after graduation. Employment competencies are the abilities students need to enhance their own qualities and achieve social and professional independence after graduation. Furthermore, it aims to foster an understanding of the abilities and attitudes required of global talent, considering the post-graduation paths of International Studies students. This course cultivates employability by engaging students in projects centered on themes such as "Understanding Various Work Styles" and "Considering Industries." This approach addresses the changing economic and social landscape in Japan and the progression of globalization, aiming to develop the social and professional perspectives crucial for post-graduation career choices. Students envision their future career design while considering what abilities are required as working professionals and strive to develop them. To this end, they engage with various work-based assignments reflecting the latest career trends, cultivating foundational generic skills, including communication abilities. Furthermore, to envision their own career design within globalization, students tackle challenges such as: ① Understanding work styles based on Inter-Cultural Understanding and multicultural coexistence, ② Understanding the characteristics of overseas assignments, and ③ Understanding global careers within Japan.

Theme	• Deepen self-understanding and comprehension of industries and job types to design post-graduation careers. • Develop employment readiness (written and oral expression) through practical preparation for the actual job search process.
Course Objectives and Overview	This course, along with the subsequent International Career Design B, aims to help students envision their future lifestyles and careers by identifying their interests and strengths, and to acquire the necessary skills, attitudes, and mindset to realize that vision. To achieve these objectives, the course will be conducted primarily through lectures, supplemented by appropriate use of pair work and group work. The course outline is as follows: First, students will discover their own values regarding "the meaning of work" and connect these to specific career paths. Next, they will gather information on social issues, industries, and companies with interest, then express their own thoughts on these topics. Students will then deepen their understanding of "the self" and summarize what is necessary to achieve their future goals. They will also learn about the connections and characteristics between industries relevant to their faculty's career paths and explain these to others.

Course Objectives and Overview	Following the Spring Semester course International Career Design A, this course aims to help students envision their future lifestyles and careers by identifying their interests and strengths, and to acquire the necessary skills, attitudes, and mindset to realize that vision. To achieve these objectives, the course will be conducted primarily through lectures, supplemented by appropriate use of pair work and group work. Building upon the "Self-Analysis and Self-Understanding" conducted in the spring semester, the course overview focuses on enabling students to objectively and effectively "express themselves" to others regarding their strengths and weaknesses. Furthermore, it deepens the "Introduction to Industry Research" also conducted in the spring semester. Students will identify their desired career paths by grasping the characteristics of industries and companies from multiple perspectives, including societal issues, industries considered as potential undergraduate career paths, and connections between industries.

Theme	• Deepen self-understanding and comprehension of industries and job types to design post-graduation careers. • Develop employment readiness (written and oral expression) through practical preparation for the actual job search process.
Course Objectives and Overview	Following the Spring Semester course International Career Design A, this course aims to help students envision their future lifestyles and careers by identifying their interests and strengths, and to acquire the necessary skills, attitudes, and mindset to realize that vision. To achieve these objectives, the course will be conducted primarily through lectures, supplemented by appropriate use of pair work and group work. Building upon the "Self-Analysis and Self-Understanding" conducted in the spring semester, the course overview focuses on enabling students to objectively and effectively "express themselves" to others regarding their strengths and weaknesses. Furthermore, it deepens the "Introduction to Industry Research" also conducted in the spring semester. Students will identify their desired career paths by grasping the characteristics of industries and companies from multiple perspectives, including societal issues, industries considered as potential undergraduate career paths, and connections between industries. Furthermore, thorough SPI preparation (15 minutes per session, 20 sessions annually) will solidify the foundational skills necessary to participate in recruitment selection processes.

Theme	To enhance employability skills for achieving desired career paths.
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Seminar A aims to cultivate the employment skills necessary for students to proactively and independently determine their post-graduation career paths. Leveraging the seminar format, the course primarily utilizes group work. Students will focus on "self-analysis," "industry and company research," and "creating application motivation statements." Since personalized preparation is crucial for achieving desired career paths, starting job-hunting preparations through this seminar format promotes self-understanding and corporate insight, enabling students to conduct satisfying job searches. Students develop the ability to objectively assess themselves and express their thoughts logically. Simultaneously, they deepen their knowledge of industries through company and industry research. This process helps them form the foundation for motivation statements that link their personal strengths to specific occupations, cultivating the fundamental skills needed to become professionals. Classes employ interactive, practice-based formats and problem-based learning (PBL). For example, students learn through practical activities such as group discussions, developing motivation for applying, and group interviews.

Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	To enhance employability skills for achieving desired career paths.
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Seminar A aims to cultivate the employment skills necessary for students to proactively and independently determine their post-graduation career paths. Leveraging the seminar format, the course primarily utilizes group work. Students will focus on "self-analysis," "industry and company research," and "creating application motivation statements." Since personalized preparation is crucial for achieving desired career paths, starting job-hunting preparations through this seminar format promotes self-understanding and corporate insight, enabling students to conduct satisfying job searches. Students develop the ability to objectively assess themselves and express their thoughts logically. Simultaneously, they deepen their knowledge of industries through company and industry research. This process helps them form the foundation for motivation statements that link their personal strengths to specific occupations, cultivating the fundamental skills needed to become professionals. Classes employ interactive, practice-based formats and problem-based learning (PBL). For example, students learn through practical activities such as group discussions, developing motivation for applying, and group interviews.

Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	To enhance employability skills for achieving desired career paths.
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Seminar A aims to cultivate the employment skills necessary for students to proactively and independently determine their post-graduation career paths. Leveraging the seminar format, the course primarily utilizes group work. Students will focus on "self-analysis," "industry and company research," and "creating application motivation statements." Since personalized preparation is crucial for achieving desired career paths, starting job-hunting preparations through this seminar format promotes self-understanding and corporate insight, enabling students to conduct satisfying job searches. Students develop the ability to objectively assess themselves and express their thoughts logically. Simultaneously, they deepen their knowledge of industries through company and industry research. This process helps them form the foundation for motivation statements that link their personal strengths to specific occupations, cultivating the fundamental skills needed to become professionals. Classes employ interactive, practice-based formats and problem-based learning (PBL). For example, students learn through practical activities such as group discussions, developing motivation for applying, and group interviews.

Theme	To enhance employability skills for achieving desired career paths.
Course Objectives and Overview	International Career Seminar C aims to cultivate the employment skills necessary for international students seeking employment in Japan to proactively and independently determine their post-graduation career paths. Leveraging the seminar format, the course primarily utilizes group work. Key areas of focus include: "Understanding Japan's unique job-hunting environment and methodologies," "Self-analysis," "Industry and company research," "Developing application motivation statements," and "Interview preparation." Since personalized preparation is crucial for achieving desired career paths, the course aims to advance job-hunting readiness through workshop-style sessions. By deepening self-understanding and corporate knowledge, students will conduct satisfying job searches and realize their career goals. Students will develop the ability to objectively assess themselves and express their thoughts logically through Japanese Expression. Through company and industry research, they will deepen their knowledge of industries, form the foundation for motivation statements that link their strengths to specific occupations, and cultivate the fundamental skills required to become professionals. Classes employ interactive, practice-based formats and problem-based learning (PBL). For example, students learn through practical activities such as group discussions, developing motivation for applying, and group interviews.

Theme	To deepen Inter-Cultural Understanding and cultivate a global mindset through work experience in Southeast Asia and Australia.
Course Objectives and Overview	The Overseas Internship Program is a program conducted during the summer vacation period (August and September) when classes are not held. It involves gaining work experience at Japanese companies and other organizations in Southeast Asia and Australia. Through overseas practical training, students develop perspectives on society and careers to inform future career paths and job choices, while also deepening their understanding of the qualities, attitudes, and values required of global talent. Participation in placements at overseas companies, organizations, or workplaces requires mandatory attendance at pre-departure guidance sessions held on campus. The program's objective is to connect university learning with practical work experience at overseas Japanese companies and workplaces, thereby fostering future social and professional independence.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relation to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	Through work experience at overseas Japanese companies or offices, students will connect their university studies with practical social experience, enabling them to develop awareness of future social and professional independence. Furthermore, work experience in a different cultural society will deepen their understanding of overseas work styles, the characteristics of overseas assignments, and collaboration with local staff, cultivating the qualities, attitudes, and values required of global talent. Additionally, students will enhance their English communication skills, cultivate an international perspective, prepare to become globally active professionals, and ultimately be capable of thriving in diverse fields both within Japan and internationally.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	Journals created during the internship will be returned by the supervisor after submission. Students should reflect on themselves based on the returned journal and apply this reflection to the next internship.

Regarding this course To take this course	Smooth communication overseas requires a certain level of English communication ability. Therefore, taking the TOEIC® test (IP version also acceptable) either before or after the training is mandatory. When taking this course, you must attend the orientation session held by the Career Center to understand the fundamental purpose and objectives of Overseas Internship. Please note that Overseas Internship, like domestic internships, strictly requires professional etiquette. Furthermore, while the security situation in the host region/country is relatively stable, it differs from that in Japan. Therefore, maintain a sense of vigilance throughout the entire program.

Theme	Acquiring media literacy through knowledge of The Media and Advertising and the creation of plans
Course Objectives and Overview	The proliferation of information and communication technologies has led to the diversification of media such as SNS (Social Networking Services), significantly transforming advertising practices. This course cultivates media literacy by examining the current state and ideal form of advertising in contemporary society, along with future challenges, through concrete case studies and practical exercises. Furthermore, students will set their own goals for each class session using a "Goal Management Sheet" before the class begins. After the class, they will self-assess whether they achieved their goals, thereby learning goal-achievement methods and cultivating a goal-oriented mindset.
Prerequisites and Notes	Microsoft PowerPoint is required for class participation and assignment completion. Students without access to PowerPoint cannot enroll in this course.
Relevance to DP	For information regarding the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	After learning about the role of advertising and the characteristics of diversifying media, the goal is to acquire media literacy by creating actual communication plans and advertisements.
Support for Qualifications and Certification Exams
Feedback Method	The week following each lecture will be dedicated to reviewing the previous week's material. Practical assignments should be uploaded to the learning portal, and feedback will be provided at a later date.
Active Learning Initiatives	Discussion, Debate, Deliberation / Presentation, Announcement, Report
Courses Taught by Instructors with Practical Experience	The instructor for this course worked for five years creating recruitment advertisements at Recruit, followed by 15 years at a production company planning and producing events, various advertisements, promotional materials, and music. After that, they founded their own company. They possess over 30 years of practical experience in advertising and marketing, working with a wide range of clients from major corporations to government agencies and small/medium-sized enterprises. They remain active as a planner today. In this course, drawing on this practical experience, the instructor will explain the relationship, functions, challenges, and future potential of The Media and Advertising, using concrete examples.

Regarding this course Taking this course	"keeping promises." This is the first ability demanded of you as a working adult. The key point is how you can proactively take action while developing the habit of keeping promises through the course. Active participation and continuous motivation for improvement are required from the students themselves. Merely attending class and submitting assignments is not sufficient to earn credits.

Theme	Through internships (work experience learning), gain insight into society, the meaning of work, and oneself.
Course Objectives and Overview	Internships involve practical training (work experience) at companies, local governments, or other organizations during the summer break (August/September) or spring break (February/March) when classes are not held. Through this training, students deepen their understanding of society and occupations, cultivating perspectives on society and careers to inform future career paths and occupational choices. Before being dispatched to companies, organizations, or workplaces, students undergo prior guidance or training on campus to deepen their understanding of the significance and purpose of the internship. They then complete a placement of at least one week (five actual working days) at the host organization. After the placement, students write an experience report to recognize the outcomes and challenges encountered during the internship.
Prerequisites and Notes
Relation to DP	For details on the relationship between this course and the Degree Policy (DP), please refer to the following URL: https://www.keiho-u.ac.jp/faculty/taken/curriculummap.html
Learning Outcomes	By gaining work experience at companies, organizations, or workplaces for a specified period, students will connect their university studies with practical social experience. This enables them to become conscious of future social and professional independence. Furthermore, it motivates them toward proactive career choices, cultivates employability including social and occupational perspectives, and heightens awareness of job hunting activities essential for realizing their desired career paths.

Grade	G2	Teaching Method	Practical Training
Course Category	Faculty of International Studies Specialized Education Subject
Theme	Through internships (work experience learning), gain insight into society, the meaning of work, and oneself.
Course Objectives and Overview	Internships involve practical training (work experience) at companies, local governments, or other organizations during the summer break (August/September) or spring break (February/March) when classes are not held. Through this training, students deepen their understanding of society and occupations, cultivating perspectives on society and careers to inform future career paths and occupational choices. Before being dispatched to companies, organizations, or workplaces, students undergo prior guidance or training on campus to deepen their understanding of the significance and purpose of the internship. They then complete a placement of at least one week (five actual working days) at the host organization. After the placement, students write an experience report to recognize the outcomes and challenges encountered during the internship.
